LAWYERS WANT TO DECIDE ON STATE JUDGES

only Estes Park was suggested, but its distance from central and southern Colorado was not considered in its favor.

New Members Admitted.
The association admitted to membership the following lawyers: George H. Bickelmann, Waldenburg, Fraser Brown, Denver; Denver, John E. Fisher, Denver; John W. Graham, Denver; Langdon H. Jarrell, Denver; David Plessner, Denver; Morrison Shaffroth, Denver; Barnwell S. Stuart, Denver; J. Foster Symmes, Denver; James H. Taylor, Denver; Henry Trowbridge, Denver; Philip S. Van Alse, Denver; Albert L. York, Denver; Thomas R. Woodrow, Denver; and W. D. Wright, Jr., Denver.
A banquet at the Antlers hotel last night closed the convention.
The most interesting discussion of the day occurred at the morning session, when the special committee on the promulgation of rules by the supreme court reported the rules proposed by the court. Judge H. G. Lund of this city was chairman of the committee. Chief Justice Gabbert was in attendance at the session and took a keen interest in the proceedings.

Service of Summons.
The discussion came up over a rule ordered by the supreme court to go into effect in September, denying the right of attorneys to serve summons in a suit, and making it necessary to file the complaint under the seal of a district or county court clerk before the summons could be served. Attorneys took the stand that they should not be denied the privilege of serving summons in a suit, immediate action being frequently desired before the complaint is filed.
By a vote of practically 2 to 1, the committee recommended that the supreme court to revoke the ruling.
During the discussion the lawyer who uses the summons as an aid to blackmail was discussed, and it was suggested that if the rule was so misinterpreted, the attorney should be barred.

Early Colorado Law.
In Colorado, by Judge Wilbur F. Stone, one of the interesting reports of the day was that on the beginning of the new law as to the procedure in Colorado, and the association voted to continue the work of the committee and to provide a fund for travel through the state to interview pioneers and secure accurate data.
The speaker at yesterday morning's session was John D. Bickelmann, of the law school of the University of Colorado at Boulder. Dean Fleming dealt with his subject, "Common Law and the Code." In a humorous vein, tracing the present-day common law from the basic English courts.

M. E. INGALLS, NOTED RAILROAD MAN, DIES

Victim of Heart Failure at Hot Springs; Leaves Widow and Daughter

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., July 11.—Melville E. Ingalls, railroad and hotel man, died here early today of heart failure.
The body will be taken to Cincinnati tomorrow and the funeral will be held Monday at Unitarian church, there. These pallbearers have been selected: Charles P. Taft, John W. Warrington, Harry Geat, Arthur Sperr, Frank Wilkerson, Judson Harmon, E. P. Gaborne, J. C. B. Scarborough, W. B. Brown, Joseph White, William Warrington and C. E. Holmes all of Cincinnati and George Simon of Los Angeles.
Beside the widow and daughter, Mr. Ingalls is survived by four sons, Melville E. Ingalls, Jr., and Max Ingalls of New York; George H. Ingalls of Chicago and Albert S. Ingalls of Cleveland.
No statement was made here today on behalf of the family as to the extent of the dead man's estate, further than that there is a will and that his death having been anticipated, his affairs had been set in order. It was said he withdrew from all active business some time ago and had disposed of many of his interests to those whom he wished to have them.

Big Railroad Man.
Until two years ago, he was chairman of the board of directors of the Big Four railroad, the Transportation Line with which his name was most widely identified, although he was a powerful figure in what generally are known as the Vanderbilt group of railroads. Besides his home here, he had a home in Cincinnati and also one in Washington, D. C.
Mr. Ingalls was born at Harrison, Me., in 1842, was reared on a farm and educated in Bowdoin and Harvard. His career as a railroad man and financier began in 1870, when he became president of the Maine Central and then of the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette railroad. In the reorganizations, he created the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Chicago and later consolidated it with other railroads forming the Big Four system of which he was the chairman. He was president of the Cincinnati and Ohio from 1888 to 1890. Was Democratic candidate for mayor of Cincinnati in 1888 and president of the National Cattle Federation in 1897. Was also interested in banking in Cincinnati.

The two materials resolutions adopted at the Carranza Villa conference were as follows:
"Whereas the first object of the constitutional army is the possession of the office as provisional president of the republic in conformity of the plan of Guadalupe, he shall call a convention which shall discuss and promulgate the constitution of the republic, and the association voted to continue the work of the committee and to provide a fund for travel through the state to interview pioneers and secure accurate data.
The speaker at yesterday morning's session was John D. Bickelmann, of the law school of the University of Colorado at Boulder. Dean Fleming dealt with his subject, "Common Law and the Code." In a humorous vein, tracing the present-day common law from the basic English courts.
L. Ward Bannister, Denver litigation expert, was the speaker of the afternoon meeting, at which he discussed "The Question of Federal Control of State Waters in the Priority States." The matter proved of much interest to the constitutional army, who had been involved in suits with similar discussions.

EIGHT BALLOONS PUT CLASH IN IRELAND OUT FROM ST. LOUIS IS FEARED TODAY

One Explodes Just Before the Start; Encounter Poor Weather Conditions

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—"San Francisco 1915" and the "Uncle Sam" were the only balloons of the eight balloons sailing from here late today in the race to determine the third American entrant to the international contest for the James Gordon Bennett trophy to be heard from up to midnight.

As the balloons passed out of sight of the watchers at the starting grounds they were drifting south by east and south by west so slowly that at times they scarcely seemed to move. Because of weather, bureau wind forecasts, however, it is believed they will all be headed toward the Great Lakes by daylight.

The first balloon heard from was the "San Francisco 1915" which crossed the Meramec river 15 miles southwest of here at 7:30 o'clock.

The "Uncle Sam" was reported 20 miles southeast of St. Louis at 11:30. At that time the balloon was not more than 150 feet from the ground and was headed directly east.

Eight Get Good Start

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—Drifting slowly to the south until they disappeared beyond the horizon, eight balloons sailed from here today in the race to determine the third American entrant to the international contest for the James Gordon Bennett cup in Kansas City, next October. As the prevailing air currents are southwest to northwest, according to the weather bureau, it is thought all the balloons will be headed toward the Great Lakes by daylight tomorrow.

One accident marred the start of the race—the bursting of the balloon "Hoochie" 45 minutes before the time scheduled to open the contest. It is believed the cloth of the great gas bag was not in the best of condition, and gave way under the high expansion of gas caused by the temperature, as the thermometer at the start level stood at 70 degrees.

So nearly still was the air as the balloons rose from the immense pit where the race was held—a pit, in which the sun beat down with scorching rays, while not a trace of a breeze could be felt—that they drifted slowly back and forth, seeking a current that would bear them on. The first to sail, entered as No. 2, was released at 4:30, one minute before the announced starting time, and the other balloons quickly started. The balloon "Uncle Sam" flew the pennant of the Press club of St. Louis.

Carry Life-Preservers

All the pilots carried life preservers for use should they land in the Great Lakes. The pilots were sparing with their ballast and several took a low current.

The first two American entrants in the international race are, the men who, at first, and second place in the last international race, R. H. Upson of Kansas City and H. E. Hendry of St. Louis. The third entrant will be the aeronaut who makes the longest flight in an air-bus in the race today.

Each balloon has a capacity of 30,000 cubic feet and the aeronauts sail equipped for a long flight. The record for American flights was made in 1910 by Allen R. Hawley, who flew from St. Louis to Lake Umbagog, Quebec, a distance of 1,173 miles. The world's distance of 1,173 miles. The world's distance of 1,173 miles. The world's distance of 1,173 miles.

Entrants in Race

Following is the order in which the balloons were released at intervals of five minutes:

- 1—America III, pilot, Dr. Jerome Kingsbury, New York, aide, Clarence Wynne, Philadelphia.
- 2—San Francisco 1915, pilot, E. S. Cole, St. Louis, aide, R. E. Emerson, Springfield, Mo.
- 3—Uncle Sam, pilot, Paul J. McCullough, St. Louis, aide, William H. Trefft, St. Louis.
- 4—Miss Sofia, pilot, William Assmann, St. Louis, no aide.
- 5—Aero club of St. Louis, pilot, John Berry, St. Louis, aide, Albert Von Hoffman, Jr., St. Louis.
- 6—Kansas City III, pilot John Watts, Kansas City, aide, W. J. Comstock, Kansas City.
- 7—Pennsylvania, pilot, Arthur E. Atterholt, Philadelphia, aide, Philip Sharples, Philadelphia.
- 8—Goodyear, pilot, R. A. D. Preston, Akron, O., aide, M. D. Tremell, Akron.

Battle of the Boyne to Be Celebrated and Authorities Prepare for Trouble

BELFAST, July 11.—If the celebration of the battle of the Boyne passes without a collision between Orangemen and Catholics, the home rulers of Ulster will have passed another critical danger point.

The anniversary of the battle falls on Sunday, and every Protestant church in Belfast, particularly the Presbyterians, will have references to the day in service.

The demonstration in honor of the day will take place on Monday, when a great procession will march to Drumcree to hold customary celebration. The Protestant section of Belfast is decorated more lavishly than in former years. Flags and banners, bearing inscriptions defining home rule, flash everywhere. Armed guards surround the headquarters of Sir Edward Carson, together with several battalions of volunteers, caused much excited talk, despite such exhibitions of high feeling, men in close touch with the people of both factions predict that the occasion will pass without any conflagration.

The Nationalists assert that the covenanters are working up a purely artificial crisis to frighten the government into accepting the "fourth amendment" for the exclusion of the whole of Ulster from home rule.

Thousands of members of the constabulary have been brought north to preserve peace on Monday, but this is about the number usually mobilized to repress the feelings of the wearers of the Orange and of the Green on the most contentious day on the Irish calendar.

GLASGOW, July 11.—Twenty-five thousand west Scotland Orangemen held a demonstration at Blantyre, Lanarkshire, this evening. The grand master of Scotland, the Rev. David Nesse, declared their policy regarding home rule was "no surrender."

Great crowds witnessed the procession through the streets and lively skirmishes occurred, but only four persons were arrested.

Democrats Use Revenue Cutters for Pleasure Jaunts, Declares Good

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Representative Good, Republican of Iowa, made an attack in the house today on the use of government revenue cutters as "pleasure craft" by Secretary McAdoo.

McAdoo, a Representative, "good" declared the Onondaga made regular week-end trips out of Boston to accommodate "parties of Democrats." He quoted an article from a newspaper saying Mr. McAdoo had made a cruise to Mattapoisett, Mass., on the Onondaga. Mr. Good read a statute enacted some time ago prohibiting the use of revenue cutters except for government business.

"If the public had the power," he concluded, "it would demand the removal of the secretary of the treasury who not only fails to enforce the law but himself incurs it."

Representative Glass said Mr. Good had made charges that, if true, amount to malfeasance in office.

"I'd like to know how much truth there is in them," declared Representative Glass. He said he believed the secretary paid out of his pocket the expenses of his cutter transportation when on private business.

700 New York Policemen Preserve the Peace at Anarchist Demonstration

NEW YORK, July 11.—Free speech was allowed to Anarchist and radical organizations in their demonstrations for their three adherents killed in the dynamite explosion on July 4. No disturbance resulted from the voicing of radical views by speakers who were greeted with cheers of applause by bands of red and black crepe-bearers and men of sympathy or indifference from the largest number composing the crowd of several thousand persons drawn to Union square by announcement of the demonstration.

Seven hundred policemen mounted guard during the meeting. Complying with the two restrictions imposed by the authorities, the demonstrators did not bring to the square the urn with the ashes of Arthur Garfield Hays and Carl Hansen, the victims of the explosion. Nor did they form a parade.

Navy Men Can Have Their Favorite Brand of Tobacco, Says Daniels

WASHINGTON, July 11.—General satisfaction was expressed throughout naval circles when it became known that Secretary Daniels, contrary to expectations, had authorized the retention of popular brands of tobacco and articles which had been rumored would be denied admission to the commissary stores.

The action of the secretary following the enforcement of his order abolishing the officers' wine mess officially upset what had become a general belief among the enlisted men that they would be denied certain proprietary articles which they had heretofore enjoyed. Under the new order, not only will these articles, which have been carried in the commissary departments, be retained, but it is intended to assure greater latitude of choice to the men by admitting additional brands of tobacco and personal commodities. In announcing his decision, Secretary Daniels said:

"I firmly believe that the enlisted men of the fleet should be allowed to buy what they want. I feel that in purchasing these supplies I am acting as trustees for the men and that it is my duty to make this possible so far as lies in my power."

Under the excuse that the majority of the men wished particular brands, I found that purchases had been confined in many cases to one brand of toilet articles or tobacco. Under the new plan there will be a far greater variety of brands in each line. Commissary stores ashore and afloat will offer the men as nearly as possible the same variety to select from that they would have in a civilian store.

make it almost a certainty that the only terms the Constitutionalists will offer will be the acceptance of the plan of Guadalupe, which would mean virtually an unconditional surrender of the federal forces.

That such might be effected in order to save the masses in the federal territories from an invasion by the large Constitutional army is generally believed. A peaceful occupation of Mexico City by a small part of the Constitutionalists would accomplish the same object for Carranza, the assumption of power and prevent looting and sacking of the city.

Sullivan at Saltillo

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan expect now to receive complete news reports of the intentions of the Constitutionalists. As John R. Sullivan, formerly American consul at Saltillo, has arrived there again, the Washington administration is not inclined to assume any active part in the situation at present, but content to let the Constitutionalists and Huerta work out a solution of the problem in their own way.

Constitutionalists here, in commenting on Francisco Carranza, said he would not be amenable to them as provisional president as he was allied with the Huerta administration and closely identified with the Cientifico group.

Although General Carranza has not sent formal answer to the South American mediators, his announcement that he intended to carry out the plan of Guadalupe is regarded here as a flat rejection of the proposal. Carranza had told the mediators he would consult his generals on a change in the plan of Guadalupe, and today's statement is taken to mean that none would be accepted.

MINERS AND I.W.W. CLASH; ONE IS SHOT, ASSAILANT JAILED

TONOPAH, Nev., July 11.—One man was shot and his assailant was placed in jail for protection here tonight in a riot between members of the Western Federation of Miners and their sympathizers and men said to belong to the Industrial Workers of the World.

The fighting occurred in Miner's Union hall. Fifty Western Federation men, seeking to tear from the walls placards put up by the Industrial Workers, including a threatening threat, met resistance from the I.W.W. supporters. Instantly the hall rocked with an all-around fight. In the melee, one man drew a revolver and fired. Jacob Whiting, a miner of the Western Federation crowd, was shot in the leg. There was a rush for the man who did the shooting, which was quelled by the police, and he was hustled into jail. Industrial Workers of the World have been holding meetings here for about three weeks. They have effected an organization among restaurant employees.

TIMBER LAND IN CONTROL OF FEW

MOST OF IT HELD FOR SPECULATION

Commissioner Davies of the Bureau of Corporations Submits Report

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Concentration of timber lands in the United States in the hands of a few owners is discussed at length in the second and third parts of the report of the bureau of corporations on the lumber industry, submitted to President Wilson today by Commissioner Davies.

Two men hold 48 per cent of the timber in southwestern Washington, the report says; five men hold 36 per cent in western Oregon; six have 70 per cent in northeastern California; 10 have more than half in the redwood area, and in north-central Idaho four holders have 50 per cent.

Held for Speculation

"The control of our standing timber in a comparatively few enormous holdings, speculatively held far in advance of any use thereof, and the great increase in the value of timber, resulting in part from such speculative holdings, are underlying facts that will become more and more important elements in determining the price of lumber as the supply of timber diminishes," says the report.

"The main fact shown is that 1,694 timber owners hold in fee over one-twentieth of the land area of the entire United States from the Canadian to the Mexican border. In many states these 1,694 own no lands at all. In the 900 timbered counties investigated, they own one-seventh of the area.

Part of Land Worthless

"Not all this land is suitable for agriculture. In the south and in the lake states and in part of the west a large portion of it can be used for agriculture, after the timber is removed, but in many parts of the west the land is mountainous and adapted chiefly to reforestation. Much of the railroad-owned land outside the timber regions is arid or semiarid.

"In the upper peninsula of Michigan 45 per cent of the land is held mostly in fee, by 32 timber owners. In Florida, 52 holders (mostly timber owners) hold one-third of the land in the entire state.

"Lands, grants and loose, ill-enforced land laws are the historical background of the concentration of land and timber ownership shown in this report. A study of the present ownership of 1,370,000 acres of railroad, wagon-road and canal-grant lands, covering most of the granted lands in the map area, and a little elsewhere, shows that of these particular lands, granted long ago to single corporations, apparently with the idea that they would be quickly sold to settlers, only 15 per cent are now distributed in small holdings. Eighty-five per cent are owned by the grantees or their successors, or by large timber holders. Of $250,000 acres granted to three western railroads in the '60s, the roads still retained 40 per cent in 1910.

States Aid Concentration

"Moreover, the states appear to have disposed of the various federal grants made to them in such a way as to contribute to the concentration of land and timber ownership. Florida is a striking example of this. Again, the public land laws, the cash sale law (now repealed), the strip laws and the homestead and timber and stone laws operated, at least in timber regions, transfer government lands directly or almost directly to grant holders.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the 1,500,000 acres comprised in the largest timber holding in the lake states was acquired in a wholesale manner, chiefly from tracts disposed of by the government through grants to the state or under the scrip and the cash sale laws.

"This marked concentration in the ownership of land has two important aspects. The first is the concentration of control of the natural resources, other than agricultural in the area, comprised in these great holdings. Besides the timber now standing, part of the land must be depended on, together with the national forests, to supply future crops of timber. Furthermore, some of it has valuable resources of ores, oil, gas, water power, etc.

"The second is the possibility that these holdings, which will form a considerable proportion of the future area used for agriculture in this country may be retained under concentrated control. Formerly lumbermen often got rid of their cut-over land at nominal prices or let it go for acres. But as the agricultural possibilities of such land have become apparent this policy is being abandoned.

"A large part of the present cut-over land is now of considerable value for tillage. That part of the present timberland which, when denuded will be arable, will have a higher and higher value as land the longer the timber is kept uncut, because if the timber is held for many years the land when finally denuded will be in a better demand for agriculture. Such a condition suggests the following potential effects upon the public: High prices for land sold to farmers increase of the tenantry system, or direct farming by large corporations.

"The data obtained by the bureau, so far as land is concerned, are not sufficient for a study of the land problem as a whole. They cover only the class of owners, the timbermen, and only part of the country.

Show Partial Condition

"They show conditions only at the time of the investigation, and do not show whether the concentration is increasing or decreasing. They are not typical of present conditions in agricultural communities, where the average size of holding is, of course, much smaller. Though incomplete, this data is, nevertheless, suggestive and worthy of serious consideration.

"Most of the land grants made on conditions, and it appears that in many cases not all of the conditions were complied with. The government is now attacking some of these grants for alleged violation of the conditions imposed.

"The abuse of the general land laws in the past suggests that any lands restored to the public domain by these, or other, forfeiture suits should not be disposed of under the present land laws. To allow such lands to be taken up by private parties before the revision of the public land laws has been completed would be to lose much of the public benefit from their recovery."

NEGRESS IS LYNCHED IN SOUTH CAROLINA FOR KILLING CHILD

ORANGEBURG, S. C., July 12.—Rosa Carson, a negress, was taken from the jail at Ellerbe, near here, today and lynched. She is said to have confessed to beating to death the 12-year-old daughter of Dr. F. Bell.

The negress was taken to the scene of the crime by the mob and hanged to a tree. Afterward the body was riddled with bullets. The confession was made just previous to the hanging.

Searching parties found the body of the murdered child early today after an all night hunt partly hidden beneath a log and covered with wounds. The child disappeared late Saturday.

Suspicion was directed toward the negress on account of recent trouble with the child's family.

FIFTH PLAGUE CASE IS REPORTED IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—Another case of bubonic plague, the fifth since the disease appeared two weeks ago, was found here today by Dr. W. C. Rucker, assistant surgeon-general of the United States health service.

The victim, the first woman to be stricken, is a negress who was employed in a restaurant within two blocks of where the first case was found. She was near death tonight.

Approximately 4,000 rats have been examined since the first plague case without finding any signs of infection.

MOTION PICTURE STARS PUT REAL PATHOS INTO FILM DRAMA; CROWDS SEE FINE ACTING

Romaine Fielding and Edwin Arden Thrill Big Audience in Production of 'Eagle's Nest'

The crowds which followed Romaine Fielding's company yesterday out of the mesa supposed they were on a lark. They did not anticipate they would have their heart strings pulled. Fielding was directing the reproduction of some 50 scenes for Edwin Arden's forthcoming motion picture of the "Eagle's Nest."

It was Arden's first appearance in motion pictures, and while he and Fielding have been on the regular stage for years, Arden was not sure of himself in the silent drama. One scene depicts Arden, the leading juvenile, standing with two companions, common, big-hearted mountaineers, and looking at the grave of Arden's mother.

The acting, or lack of acting, was perfect. The moving picture machines were grinding away their truthful record when two big tears rolled down Arden's cheek. It was the personification of an actor throwing his whole self into the part and influencing his fellow actors, and really "moving" the crowd.

ROMAINE FIELDING

Put in "Real Stuff."

"You're a dub, Eddy," said Fielding. "You certainly put a bit of real stuff in that."

"Oh, I don't know, you'd have done the same," replied Arden.

It wasn't more than half an hour later that a scene occurred between these two big men in the play. Fielding, who takes the leading role as the heavy, is supposed to have killed Arden's mother and the most realistic struggle takes place. Fielding's numerous and wonderful facial expressions are known to the theatrical world over. He, like Arden, depends on expression and not on ranting. In the play Arden has won the love of the girl Fielding loves. It was a battle royal. Fielding was not armed as they grappled, but Arden was. The crowd stood on its tip-toes as the actors away from side to side. Arden's gun arm was pinned; the gun dropped. Then Fielding fought for a ferocious hold on the slighter man, and lifting him bodily over his head, threw him over what seemed to be a high cliff. Fielding stood and defiantly surveyed his conquest. Such a picture of anger can scarcely be imagined. Tears of absolute hatred were recorded by the camera.

As they stopped, Arden gathered himself together, came to Fielding at the close of the scene and said: "You're a dub, Romaine. You had the real stuff in that." And the two men laughed.

It was the personification of the highest type of acting.

VOLUNTEER OFFICERS' RETIRED LIST URGED

G. A. R. Post Adopts Resolutions Asking Congress to Provide for Volunteer Veterans

Resolutions relating the organization on record as being in favor of and ready to support a movement to secure the passage through congress of a bill for the establishment of a volunteer officers' retired list have been passed by Post No. 22, G. A. R. According to the text of the resolution, the United States has never made provision for the proper care of the volunteer veterans of the Civil war. The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, the outbreak of the Civil war when a volunteer army was being formed to suppress rebellion and maintain our free government, distinct pledges were made by the federal authorities that officers of volunteers should, with respect to pay and emoluments, be placed on an equality with officers of similar rank in the regular army; and

Whereas, the great and arduous conflict was carried on and fought to a successful issue mainly through the self-sacrificing and heroic efforts of the volunteer soldiery—both rank and file; and

Whereas, the inducements and promises so freely held out to the volunteer officers in time of the nation's peril have been wholly ignored in some particulars, more especially in the matter of making just and adequate provision for this class of volunteer soldiers when overtaken by age and infirmities;

Through a long period of years unavailing appeals have been made to congress to establish a volunteer officers' retired list of the Civil war, not only in honor of the officers who so effectively served the country in her time of trial, but to provide in part at least for their present support in declining years;

Resolved, That we, individually, and as a Grand Army post, will most cordially support this measure for the relief of our comrades, and will by every means in our power aid in securing its passage to the nation; and it would be a disgrace to the nation to let this class of her brave defenders pass away without rendering some just recognition to their invaluable services.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be given to the public press, to members of congress, and to such others as may seem necessary and expedient.

LARGE CONSIGNMENT OF TYPEWRITERS RECEIVED BY LOCAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Thirty Underwood typewriters were received by the Brown Business college the latter part of the week. This only represents half of the order placed by Mr. Brown with the Underwood company.

While several makes of typewriters are used, the students have a preference for the Underwood.

Mr. Brown reports an increased enrollment of more than 100 per cent for the same month last year, and he states that he will have to enlarge his quarters if the increase continues.

Picking Wildflowers Merely a Marathon Reporter Knows, for He's Tried It-Once

By EARL POTTER.

Wildflowers are unattended guests. Like rooms and board they are hunted mostly by tourists. So continuously are the unattended blossoms pursued that they become wilder and wilder as the season progresses. They grow on mountain sides and short slopes. They come in the summer time, and in bunches. Picking wildflowers is merely one way of doing a marathon race.

The choicest wildflowers are those which grow 500 feet apart on a steep, rocky mountain side. Only those who are wild about wildflowers will spend the time necessary to enter a bunch of these choice flowers. The number of such flowers collected varies in direct ratio to the number of shoes in one's shoes, and sticks in one's thumb.

PEAK'S MONSTER EYE TO OPEN AT DUSK TONIGHT

Searchlight on Mountain Top Will Send Rays Into Valley; Snow on Summit Yesterday

Don Cupid has been a visitor on the Peak for the last few days and due to his influence the big searchlight on the summit did not shine last night as planned. It will flash forth tonight for the first time this season.

W. H. Attwell, who operates the mammoth eye at the top of the Peak, was married a short time ago, but did not take his honeymoon. He left the summit yesterday to bring his bride back to the top of the big mountain. He will be on duty this evening behind the powerful lenses and the gleam of the searchlight will in reality be rays from the honeymoon.

The light will be flashed on at dusk this evening and will burn every night for the remainder of the season. The management has made special effort to get the huge machine into shape in time for the visiting folks.

Snow fell on the Peak yesterday for the first time this month and early in the day three inches covered the top of the mountain. Many parties walking up the summit to watch the sunrise experienced severe cold and much discomfort from the storm. By the time the first trains arrived at the Summit house yesterday morning most of the snow had melted.

The largest crowd of the season visited the Peak yesterday and it was necessary to run three special trains to handle the people. In addition to the special the regular trains ran up with every seat filled.

RAIN AND HAIL STORM CENTERS AROUND PARK

Yesterday's Heavy Downpour South of Springs Confined to Radius of Few Miles

A fierce storm of rain and hail, which lasted for only about 15 minutes, but which assumed almost the proportions of a cloudburst, occurred yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock in the district comprising the campus, Stratton park, Broadmoor and part of Ivywild. The storm was the heaviest known in that part of the region in years. It centered at Stratton park, but extended as far up South Canon as Seven Falls, and as far into Ivywild as the Zoo.

People living along the canyon road suffered some damage to yards and houses, but the greatest damage was done in Stratton park, where the hail battered down flowers and foliage. No serious damage was done in the canyon, and all the bridges were reported last night as safe. Cheyenne creek was raised about a foot by the flood waters from the storm.

The rain washed sand on the street car tracks at the entrance to Stratton park. This delayed traffic on that line for about half an hour.

City Ready to Act on New Ordinance

A proposed ordinance which requires that any person who wishes to drive any vehicle carrying passengers for hire must obtain a license from the city clerk before doing so, and which requires that the applicant must have lived in Colorado for at least one year before such a license may be issued, was introduced at the meeting of the city council yesterday morning.

The measure is the result of consideration of the tourist driver problem by all the commissioners, and of discussions of the matter by the council in two meetings as a committee of the whole. When the ordinance was brought up yesterday, final action on it was deferred to a special meeting tomorrow morning.

The ordinance, if adopted, will give the city clerk the right to refuse any applicant for such a license, but also will give the applicant the right to appeal from the clerk's decision to the council. It will give the council the right to revoke any license summarily for any reason it thinks sufficient. In applying for his license, the applicant must state his name, address, length of residence in Colorado Springs, and his knowledge of the scenery in the Pikee Peak region. The proposed ordinance does not change the present license fees.

Aside from the discussion of the tourist driver ordinance, nothing but routine business came before the council at the meeting yesterday.

Two Candidates Out for Treasurer's Job

Two candidates at least will try for the Republican nomination for county treasurer to oppose Samuel J. Bryan, the present occupant of the office, who was elected on the Democratic ticket, and who will be a candidate to succeed himself. Albert H. Horton of 428 North Weber street, deputy clerk of the county court, will be one of the candidates. The other will be John H. Baker of 114 East Jefferson street, a public accountant. Although neither has made a formal announcement of his candidacy, both have told friends and party leaders definitely that they will make the race.

There is much satisfaction, however, in riding on a street car with a bouquet of rare wildflowers; for it will cause more envious glances than a piece of white meat of chicken at a summer boarding house.

Wildflowers often play an important part in a tourist's summer campaign. Many a wild blossom placed in a coat lapel under the blue-plush sky of a mountain side has started business for the building and loan association. Full many a wildflower is born to blush, but not unseen, and to take the count as its petals fall one by one to the flower song of "the loves me, he loves me not."

Wildflowers go by different names, but they are too wild to come. Like summer girls they arrive in various shades and shapes. Some wildflowers have fragrance, but with others it is only an odor. The primrose is one of the showiest wildflowers. It always smells as though it were ripe. The primrose blooms at night and leads a wild night life. Like some people it is all in the morning after. It is one of the things that does not obey the 12 o'clock closing law.

Each wildflower has a pistol, but none is dangerous except the shooting star. Although the wildflowers grow in beds they never sleep late. If it were not for wildflowers many boarding houses would be devoid of any attractions, thousands of little boys couldn't make happy scores of poems would remain unborn and hundreds of play fever patients might enjoy their own homes all summer.

POSTOFFICE RECEIPTS PRACTICALLY NORMAL

First Six Months Show Slight Decrease Over Last Year; Railroads About Up to Average

Despite the reports in some circles that this year is below the average as far as business goes, reports from the postoffice and the railroad offices show that business is nearly up to the average. At the postoffice for the six months ending June 30, 1914, the total receipts were $58,700.42. For the six months ending June 30, 1913, the total receipts were $58,589.16, showing a decrease of only $111.26.

According to N. L. Drew, general agent of the Colorado, Midland and railroad here, conditions are about normal, with the receipts about equalling those of last year. The baggage receipts at Manitou are even to date with those of last year also. More inquiries from Kansas and Texas have been coming in than were received last year, and Mr. Drew said yesterday that there were more people in the neighborhood of 14th Pass, Green Mountain Falls and Cascade than he had seen for several seasons.

VAN BRIGGLE POTTERY TO HOLD 'FLOWER DAY'

Spears of wild flowers will have an opportunity to see almost every variety common to this vicinity Tuesday morning at the Van Briggles pottery when the second monthly "flower day" will be held. The exhibit will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night.

The company has been making a special effort to complete the collection of Pikee Peak wild flowers and this afternoon more than a dozen people will go out into the mountains to gather the blossoms for Tuesday's exhibition. Each variety will be exhibited from vases bearing the common and botanical name of the flower.

The exhibition room of the pottery has been remodeled and new lighting fixtures added. The new shades were made at the pottery. The public is invited to the "flower day" and lectures on the making of pottery will be given as the visitors are shown through the plant.

SINTON'S WEEKLY YO-OORT LETTER

HAVE you ever tried eating your Yo-oort with salted spry crackers? If not, you are missing a delightful summer dish. Put a little salt in the Yo-oort to help bring out that rich flavor. Then drop a few crackers in the milk and eat them with the Yo-oort before they lose their crispness. Another delightful and wholesome refreshment is had by substituting popcorn for the crackers. Toast also goes well with the mild acid flavor of the Yo-oort.

Get the habit of hunting for the rich, creamy flavor of the milk. You can then realize why this food drink is coming to be so popular all over the country. By the way, did you know that Colorado Springs is getting a high-quality product in this line, cheaper than it can be had anywhere else in the country? Most of the new Bulgarian drinks which are being sold in the eastern states are either made of skim milk, or of skim milk and fresh milk mixed, half and half. And the price is away up at 10c per half-pint in the restaurants and soda fountains, and 15 to 20c per quart sold retail about town. Before commencing to manufacture Yo-oort for sale, we experimented to find out what the result would be in the quality of the product if made from skim milk. We found that the milk would nearly always be as thick as when made of whole milk, but would always lack that rich, buttery flavor that makes it so delicious. Taking everything into consideration, we decided that we would do better to make it from full-cream milk from the start, even if we could not reduce the price to quite so low a figure.

EVER EAT ANY YO-OORT CHEESE?

You can make a most delicious, soft, full-cream cheese, full of the beneficial Bulgarian germs, by hanging up a quart of Yo-oort in a fine-meshed sack, in a cold place, and allowing it to drain for about 24 hours. When it is about the consistency of butter, take down the sack and work a little salt into it, and you will have the finest, smoothest, most delicious, snow white cheese you ever tasted. TRY IT! When it is finished, spread it thick on your bread instead of butter.

DRINK YO-OORT, THE "NECTAR OF YOUTH" AND LIVE LONG.

6c per pint, 10c per quart, delivered.

INQUIRIES FROM EAST AND WEST, NORTH AND SOUTH, COMING TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Hundreds Want Information About Colorado Springs as Temporary or Permanent Home

Inquiries from prospective visitors and home-seekers are coming to the Chamber of Commerce in a greater number than ever before in the history of that organization. The character of these requests for information is such as to indicate that they are from people who are planning to come to Colorado Springs and the Pike's Peak region.

It has been a noticeable feature of the letters of the last two months that the requests for information from people contemplating spending several weeks or the summer here have been in greater number than ever before, and the value of the careful and intelligent handling of such inquiries is now manifesting itself in the number of callers every day at the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce.

Many of these are people who have previously been in correspondence with the Chamber of Commerce or who have been directed by railroad officials or by friends to call at the office for information and assistance.

Many Letters Received Daily. "If our inquiries are any index, the Pike's Peak region is this summer having a larger percentage of visitors who have come with the idea of spending the summer here than ever before, and are really making this city their summer home," said Secretary A. W. Henderson yesterday.

"Many families have written us for assistance in the matter of securing accommodations and it is a part of our regular business to help visitors secure comfortable accommodations and to extend such courtesies as they may desire."

The increase in inquiries is due in great measure to the effectiveness of advertising plans carried out by the Chamber of Commerce. Individual attention is given every letter of inquiry received, and in addition to sending printed matter descriptive of the region, every letter receives a personal answer.

The following letters, picked out of yesterday's mail, give an idea of the volume and the nature of the inquiries, and the wide territory from which they come.

From La Harpe, Kan. We have property in this town and would like to exchange for acreage near Colorado Springs, or in that part of the state farther than three miles from the railway station. We would like a small place where we could manage poultry, fruit, etc.

From Idaho, Mich. Please send me information regarding farming and the opportunities to assist in Colorado. I am planning a trip to your section to investigate conditions there.

From Kansas City, Mo. I am told that you would give me the information I want. Myself and wife want to come to your city for a short stay, a week or two. Can you give me the address of reasonable boarding houses where we could get a room for the night?

From Portland, Ore. Would you kindly inform me in regard to little homes between the Springs and Manitou? If one could get a reasonable price for a house in Colorado City and I used to live in my home, it would be a chance for a man to get some kind of employment, could you kindly tell me what a little home would cost?

COLORADO-UTAH DIVISION OF PIKE'S PEAK AUTO HIGHWAY IN SHAPE FOR MOTORISTS

Latest Reports From Towns Along Scenic Route Give Data for Touring Parties

Reports just received indicate that the Colorado and Utah divisions of the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean highway are now in good condition for motor travel. Letters came yesterday to A. W. Henderson, secretary of the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean highway, both from Glenwood Springs and from Meeker, and these, together with the reports from Salt Lake City tell of a road that is not merely passable but is practically for motor travel and is now in position to demand the transcontinental travel to which its scenic and other natural advantages entitle it.

From Colorado Springs to Leadville. A splendid road, and in Lake County, from granite to the top of Tennessee Pass, past Twin Lakes and through Leadville is a new piece of road that is superlative. It is expected that the work of completing the connection on the western side of Tennessee Pass with the narrow gauge grade will be completed within the next few weeks.

Through Grand Canon. With regard to the road through the canon of the Grand river, which has suffered this spring from high waters, the following authentic report is received: "While the road through Glenwood canon is not a modern boulevard, large and small cars are making the trip daily."

Between Meeker and Rifle. A report from Meeker says: "At this season of the year, there are likely to be frequent heavy rains, but generally the road is in good condition—in most places in excellent condition. Contractors are at work between here and Rifle and also on the Wolf Creek cutoff between White river and the connection with the Thompson road in Moffatt county. Autos are going daily between here and Vernal, Utah, and report no serious trouble. The run being usually made in seven or eight hours. Dozens of autos run daily between here and Rifle making it in about three hours. Almost any car can make it from Glenwood to Vernal in a day and within the next 30 days it can be made much easier."

Late reports from Salt Lake City say: "There is a good road from Salt Lake City via Vernal to the Colorado-Utah line, and after a few weeks the only questionable part of it, which is between Jensen and the state line, will be put in first-class shape, and the project now under way will be completed."

Photographs which have just arrived from Utah show that the stretch between Jensen and the Colorado line has recently been greatly improved.

Glenwood-Grand Junction. Regarding the road from Glenwood Springs to Grand Junction, comes this report: "Since cars are going to and from between Glenwood and Grand Junction, it would seem that the road is in good shape. We had a number of cars from the west at Glenwood this week and all came with no trouble. I understand the bad place near DeBeque has been repaired and no longer troubles motorists. I also understand that cars can make the trip into Utah west of Grand Junction. I know some have been coming from that section to this city."

The Chamber of Commerce is making special efforts this year to receive frequent and accurate reports as to road conditions throughout the state, and its headquarters in the Burns building receive daily calls from motorists desiring logs, route information and advice as to the trips radiating from this city.

At the age of 30 he quit the ring and went into the piano business with a brother at Uniontown, Pa. There he became converted, though not at a religious altar. Public school of the District of Columbia. It would appear that the Missouri congressman was not merely a personification of the bill in the interest of others, but was thoughtfully convinced of desirability of its passage. It was referred to the committee on education, which reach the committee stage in their progress to enactment, seems very likely to terminate its career at that point. Perhaps a better fate might have been secured for it had friends of Esperanto throughout the country labored in its behalf; but here it was most fortunate in regard to backing. Those who had secured its introduction seemed to think they had done enough.

Others who would have been glad to assist the cause knew nothing of this particular measure; and if it died in committee, it may fairly be said to have perished of neglect. When the attempt is renewed, it is to be hoped that a reasonable amount of concerted effort may be pledged for it in advance, and all the friends of the international language apprised that something is to be undertaken in furtherance of the common cause.

INQUIRIES FROM EAST AND WEST, NORTH AND SOUTH, COMING TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Hundreds Want Information About Colorado Springs as Temporary or Permanent Home

Inquiries from prospective visitors and home-seekers are coming to the Chamber of Commerce in greater numbers than ever before in the history of this organization. The Chamber of Commerce is receiving requests for information in such a volume that it is unable to supply them all. It is estimated that there are from 100 to 200 inquiries daily from people who are planning to come to Colorado Springs and the Pike's Peak region.

It has been a noticeable feature of the letters of the last two months that the requests for information from people contemplating spending several weeks of the summer here have been in greater number than ever before, and the value of the careful and intelligent handling of such inquiries is now manifesting itself in the number of callers every day at the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce.

Many of these are people who have previously been in correspondence with the Chamber of Commerce or who have been directed by railroad officials or by friends to call at the office for information and assistance.

Many Letters Received Daily

If our inquiries are any index, the Pike's Peak region is this summer having a larger percentage of visitors than ever before. The Chamber of Commerce has taken considerable pains to make the summer here a pleasant one for all. It has a large number of rooms and is ready to make this city their summer home. Secretary A. W. Henderson yesterday said: "Many families have written us for assistance in the matter of securing accommodations, and it is a part of our regular business to help visitors secure comfortable accommodations and to extend such courtesies as may make their stay here pleasant. Our headquarters on the fourth floor in the Burns building are open at all times to strangers and we are glad to have them come."

The increase in inquiries is due in great measure to the effectiveness of the advertising plans carried out by the Chamber of Commerce. Individual attention is given every letter of inquiry received, and in addition to sending printed matter descriptive of the region, every letter receives a personal answer.

The following letters, picked out of yesterday's mail, give an idea of the volume and the nature of the inquiries, and the wide territory from which they come:

From La Harpe, Kan.—We have property in this town we would like to exchange for acreage near Colorado Springs, or in that part of the state not farther than three miles from railway station. We would like a small place where we could make a poultry farm, etc.

From Alamo, Mich.—Please send me information regarding farming and the opportunities in eastern Colorado. I am planning a trip to your section soon to investigate conditions there.

From Kalamazoo, Mich.—The enclosed leaflet will explain briefly to you an article of merit for the sale of which in your state we are in need of a high-grade man.

From La Rye, Kan.—Please send me price of farming lands in different parts of your country. A good deal like to know whether there is still any arable land that can be homesteaded, and can one take 320 acres there as a homestead. Myself and several others are looking for location.

From Fairview, Fla.—Please send me what literature you can in reference to your town.

From San Diego, Cal.—Will you kindly send me the names of some places in your city where board can be obtained for $10 to $12 per week. I would like to be centrally located near amusement, but where there is a touch of some ground, not in a building.

From Pittsfield, Mass.—As I am having a number of inquiries in regard to Colorado Springs, especially in regard to its scenic attractions, may I ask the favor of such matter as you have for free distribution, especially those having colored views. If you have any information in regard to the extent and manner of its acquisition, I should be glad to know those particulars about Mr. Perkins' gift of the Garden of the Gods park.

From Concordia, Kan.—About the first of August I will take an Auto trip to some point in Colorado. I have been informed that there is a log of roads around Colorado Springs. What information does this give and what is the charge for the book or books?

SUNDAY'S TRAINER WILL REMAIN DURING SUMMER

Othie Sackett, Formerly Known as Young Kid McCoy, Not Going With Party Tomorrow

Billy Sunday will leave Colorado Springs tomorrow, but an important part of Billy Sunday's party will remain behind. Othie Sackett, physical trainer of the evangelist, has taken such a fancy to Colorado Springs and the Pike's Peak region that he has decided to spend the remainder of the summer here. Sackett has played a big part in the meetings closing here today, although not a conspicuous part. He has been one of the excellent personal workers and every night has threaded his way among the audience at the tabernacle and spoken a word here and there in the interest of the cause for which his employer is fighting.

Sackett intends to train several evangelists and preachers here this summer, men who have come here to recuperate from strenuous labor in the night. He is 31 years old but still handles the gloves efficiently as well as effectively.

His life has been a varied one. At the time of his conversion he was a prizefighter battling under the name of "Young Kid McCoy." During his ring career he fought 127 battles and lost but two. He won the world championship at the age of 20 years. He is a native of Pennsylvania and in his pugilistic encounters he met all the leading featherweights of the ring.

He was beaten in 1907 by Ad Wolgast in Los Angeles. In training for that battle he worked with Freddie Welsh, who last week gained a decision over Willie Ritchie in England.

Sackett is in condition all the time for he does not use tobacco or liquor. He has traveled both with a circus and a burlesque company, doing an athletic act. At the age of 20 he quit the ring and went into the piano business with a brother at Uniontown, Pa. There he became converted, though not at a revival. It was only after the meetings held at Huntington, W. Va., that Sackett came to Billy Sunday. He proved himself so valuable to the evangelist that he has been made one of the regular party.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

TAKE CARE AT FIRST SIGN OF BLADDER IRRITATION OR NAGGINESS

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so, it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

For that section of the road from Glenwood Springs via Rifle and Meeker to the state line, the following report comes from Glenwood Springs:

"Several auto loads went from here to Meeker for the fourth. One of the cars made the 74 miles in three hours and five minutes. A cloudburst swept that section Saturday night, but on Sunday it made the return in three hours flat. He covered 14 miles out of Rifle in 20 minutes—not such bad time—and this proves the road to be good as far as Meeker."

Between Meeker and Rifle

A report from Meeker says: "At this season of the year, there are likely to be frequent heavy rains, but generally the road is in good condition. In most places in excellent condition. Contractors are at work between here and Rifle and also on the Wolf Creek cutoff between White river and the connection with the Thompson road in Moffatt county. Autos are going daily between here and Vernal; Utah, and report no serious trouble. The run being easily made in seven or eight hours. Dozens of autos run daily between here and Rifle making it in about three hours. Almost any car can make it from Glenwood to Vernal in a day and, within the next 30 days, it can be made much easier."

Late reports from Salt Lake City say:

"There is a good road from Salt Lake City via Vernal to the Colorado-Utah line, and after a few weeks the only questionable part of it which is between Jensen and the state line will be put in first-class shape, and the projects now under way will be completed."

Photographs which have just arrived from Utah show that the stretch between Jensen and the Colorado line has recently been greatly improved.

Glenwood-Grand Junction

Regarding the road from Glenwood Springs to Grand Junction, comes this report:

"Since cars are going to and from between Glenwood and Grand Junction, it would seem that the road is in good shape. We had a number of cars from the west at Glenwood this week and all came with no trouble. I understand the bad place near DeBeque has been repaired and no longer troubles the autoist. I also understand that cars can make the trip into Utah west of Grand Junction. I know some have been coming from that section to this city."

The Chamber of Commerce is making special efforts this year to receive frequent and accurate reports as to road conditions throughout the state, and its headquarters in the Burns building receive daily visits from motorists, delivering news, more information and advice as to the trips radiating from this city.

Ever since the first publication of the international language there have been Esperantists who have laid great stress in their thought on its official recognition by the governments of the world, and have regarded this and this only as the mark of its actual triumph. In reality its real success depends upon its popularity, and the court of final appeal consists not of the rulers but of the masses. As there is no doubt that official support may be very helpful, in fact already, in various countries of both hemispheres, a powerful impetus has been given to Esperanto study by the favorable attitude of rulers, especially when directed to the shipping of educational courses in public schools. An example of this was afforded some time since in the United States of a Greek-Turkish island by the appreciative welcome from the prince of Samos; another and more important instance was noticed in this column a few weeks since in the case of the Esperanto institute of Saxony. In some other parts of Europe permission at least is accorded to the playing of Esperanto upon the course of teaching; in others its study among pupils or other students must be awarded independently of the curriculum, and its encouragement by teachers is a matter of individual and unofficial preference. This last condition is by no means to be regarded as deplorable, for when a purely voluntary trial of Esperanto has given good results, its subsequent admission to the regular courses will be more likely to be fruitful of permanent results.

In the city of Washington, D. C., the preliminary stage, if not yet passed, has at least been long under way. There are a number of accomplished Esperantists in our capital city, some of whom have been conversant with the language for a long period of years. Some of the highly regarded private schools of the city have admitted it to their curricula, and a large number of school children have at one time and another had it brought to their attention. It was, therefore, not without some right to expect success that "House Resolution 415" was submitted to the second session of the sixty-third congress by the Hon. Richard Bartholdt of Missouri on February 28 of the present year. This resolution reads as follows:

Resolved, that the study of Esperanto as an auxiliary language and a means of facilitating the social and commercial intercourse of the people of the United States and those of other countries shall be made a part of the regular course of study in the

OFFICIAL SUPPORT

Ever since the first publication of the international language there have been Esperantists who have laid great stress in their thought on its official recognition by the governments of the world, and have regarded this and this only as the mark of its actual triumph. In reality its real success depends upon its popularity, and the court of final appeal consists not of the rulers but of the masses. As there is no doubt that official support may be very helpful, in fact already, in various countries of both hemispheres, a powerful impetus has been given to Esperanto study by the favorable attitude of rulers, especially when directed to the shipping of educational courses in public schools. An example of this was afforded some time since in the United States of a Greek-Turkish island by the appreciative welcome from the prince of Samos; another and more important instance was noticed in this column a few weeks since in the case of the Esperanto institute of Saxony. In some other parts of Europe permission at least is accorded to the playing of Esperanto upon the course of teaching; in others its study among pupils or other students must be awarded independently of the curriculum, and its encouragement by teachers is a matter of individual and unofficial preference. This last condition is by no means to be regarded as deplorable, for when a purely voluntary trial of Esperanto has given good results, its subsequent admission to the regular courses will be more likely to be fruitful of permanent results.

In the city of Washington, D. C., the preliminary stage, if not yet passed, has at least been long under way. There are a number of accomplished Esperantists in our capital city, some of whom have been conversant with the language for a long period of years. Some of the highly regarded private schools of the city have admitted it to their curricula, and a large number of school children have at one time and another had it brought to their attention. It was, therefore, not without some right to expect success that "House Resolution 415" was submitted to the second session of the sixty-third congress by the Hon. Richard Bartholdt of Missouri on February 28 of the present year. This resolution reads as follows:

Resolved, that the study of Esperanto as an auxiliary language and a means of facilitating the social and commercial intercourse of the people of the United States and those of other countries shall be made a part of the regular course of study in the public school of the District of Columbia.

It would appear that the Missouri congressional action was not merely a new instance of the bill in the interest of others, but was thoughtfully conceived of desirability of its passage. It was referred to the committee on education, and like so many other propositions which reach the committee stage in their progress toward enactment, seems very likely to terminate its career at that point. Perhaps a better fate might have been secured for it had friends of Esperanto throughout the country labored in its behalf, but here it was most fortunate in regard to a bucking "Thomas" who had secured its introduction, seemed to think they had done enough, others who would have been glad to assist the cause knew nothing of this particular measure, and if it dies in committee, it may fairly be said to have perished of neglect. When the attempt is renewed, it is to be hoped that a reasonable amount of concerted effort may be pledged for it in advance, and all the friends of the international language, apprised that something is to be undertaken in furtherance of the common cause.

ENGLISH NOBILITY MUST PAY A TAX ON TITLES

CHANCELLOR OF EXCHEQUER ON TRAIL OF THOSE ABLE TO PAY; TOURIST AUTO LAWS MAY BE REFORMED BY GOVERNMENT

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, July 11.—The chancellor of the exchequer is being urged to make the holders of titles pay extra duty for the privilege of using them to their names.

It is suggested, however, that the tax, it is suggested, should be graduated so that titles of superior precedence should be charged more than lower styles. Dukes should pay the rate of a super-tax on an income of £50,000 and lower ranks proportionately less.

It may be that the chancellor will be ready and willing to tax the dukes, but he has made the butt of all recent democratic oratory, but it is if he will dare to tax any person less than a duke. You see, in this country you can easily get a title at a price. If you are prepared to pay, say, £250,000, to the party your title you are pretty certain of a dukedom. But then your title dies with you.

Possibly another quarter of a million will set a baronetcy and that goes on your male heirs. It is an open market that a large number of recent have been given to men for what have done for the political parties. It is hardly likely that the chancellor will dare further tax the men who have found the "fuel" to keep the party machine in motion.

Reform Tourist Auto Laws.

The chancellor of the exchequer also is considering a suggestion for a reform in the laws relating to automobiles owned by tourists from abroad. One at least should appeal to the American sightseer. As at present constituted here the law is that any foreign or overseas visitor bringing an automobile to the United States must pay for it for four months without paying any tax.

There is no objection to this concession but the auto manufacturers and dealers and the hotel keepers are petitioning for an extension of the exemption so that it shall include the visitor who buys an automobile in the United States.

CHINESE SCHOOL FOR BLIND GIVES MOST IMPORTANT EXHIBIT

French Ruler for Albania Suggested

By GEORGE DUFRENE.

PARIS, July 11.—While France is essentially a republic, small efforts are made to disguise a certain amount of pride in the descendants of the old monarchy. This is evidenced by the fact that speculation is rife as to the prospects of Prince Louis (Napoleon) succeeding to the Albanian throne should the Prince of Wales fail to hold it, which seems likely.

Prince Louis, who is Victor Napoleon's younger brother, is a Russian general, held in high esteem by the imperial family. As military governor of the Caucasus he has displayed the stern qualities of the soldier and the ruler of rough men. He is a silent, impenetrable character, and just in his methods. It is said that the Albanians would be flattered to have Bonaparte at their head, and that the Russian government would support him. In that case, the good will of France would be at once assured, if only to give pleasure to his ally.

Austria May Protest.

The difficulty lies in Austria consenting to an arrangement that would transfer influence over Albania to the hands of the French emperor. It is not the first time that a French prince has been thought of for this throne, but the Duke of Montpensier withdrew his candidature at the request of the French royalist party, the Duke of Orleans having no other successor. Since the birth of a little prince to Victor Napoleon and Princess Clementine, the same reason is not applicable to Louis Napoleon.

Repairing Storm Damage.

The municipal administration is feverishly concentrating efforts upon repairing the damage caused by the recent storm. It has been a great object lesson and the newspapers have for once had the courage to speak out. The reasons for these terrible subsidences were apparent enough, and the French people today shudder when they think of the daily rains they have run, and are running for that matter. It might be tomorrow that the ravages of a storm will create even greater chaos and disaster than those of a few short weeks ago.

The simple truth is that the French engineers, like the French doctor, are essentially scientific. As a result he allows his desire to experiment get the better of his saner judgment. In the one case he experiments on the streets, in the other on the patient. It is very clever, and the theory is beautiful, but occasionally the streets fall in or the patient discharges their contents into the roadway, as happened in the flood.

SIR EDWARD GREY

LONDON, July 11.—Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, in a speech in the house of commons, lauded the motives of President Wilson in forcing the repeal of the Panama canal tolls exemption law. He said: "President Wilson's attitude was not the result of any diplomatic communications since he has come into power. It has not been done to please us or in the interests of good relations, but I believe from a much greater motive—the feeling that a government which is to use its influence among the nations to make relations better must never, when the occasion arises, flinch or quail from interpreting treaty rights in a strictly fair spirit."

Popularize Movie Music.

I learn that Signor Renzo Sonzogno, the famous music publisher and impresario of Milan, inspired by the success of Humperdinck's music in the "Miracle," has decided to attempt to popularize music in connection with moving pictures. He has just founded a company to put his ideas into effect. He thinks that the cinematograph can be used as a feeder for opera houses, and if properly adapted can be a great means of educating the people up to the level of the classic opera.

The chances of young composers today are very few, owing to the fact that the majority of the richer and larger houses are tied in their production of new works. But Signor Sonzogno is of the opinion that there is a great future for composers who will write operettas for the film.

Among the old composers who have signed contracts with the firm of Sonzogno are Pietro Mascagni, Alberto Franchetti, Ruggero Leoncavallo, and Enrico Rossi.

It is interesting to note that "Cabiria," the great film masterpiece of D'Annunzio, was a financial failure. The cost of production was so great that after the disposal of the rights for the different countries the profits were a minimum. D'Annunzio himself received, I am told, 75,000 francs for his share in the work.

Russian Plays-Daring.

In the absence of any censorship, certain Russian plays, to say the least, are particularly daring, and it did not come as a surprise when one of the star actresses recently refused to play her allotted part in a revue at the Cigale theater.

She declared that her role was an utterly undignified character, and in addition to canceling her engagement, she claimed 112,000 damages. The decision of the court was emphatically in favor of the actress.

The judgment expressed regret that "shocking exhibitions and exceedingly spiced 'patter' should stand in the place of absent art."

ANCIENT JEWELS FOUND IN EGYPT

RARE COLLECTION NOW IN LONDON

Prof. Petrie Makes Important Discovery; Archaeological World Shocked

LONDON, July 11.—It has never happened before—it will probably never happen again—that the most entrancing exhibit at a royal society conversation should consist of a couple of cases of jewelry. No ordinary jewels, of course, could hope to gain admission to that most exclusive entertainment, except as part of the adornment of the guests; but these were most uncommon, perhaps the most extraordinary in the whole world.

They were jewels, fashioned at least 5,300 years ago; they belonged to a princess of ancient Egypt and they were so perfectly preserved that they might have just come from Bond Street except that Bond Street is not able to produce their equal in workmanship.

Their finding is one of the romances of Egyptian archeology, for they were discovered by Professor Flinders Petrie last winter near a tomb which it was supposed had centuries ago been despoiled of all its treasures. The chief prize of the collection is a wonderful amethyst necklace, "the most beautiful amethyst I have ever seen," said Professor Petrie, with gold lion claws as terminals. Then there are golden collars, exquisitely fashioned armbands, and bracelets of gold bars with turquoise and cornelian bead work, and wristlets with amulets inlaid.

The metal is entirely gold, as might be expected, and the designs are as perfect as those of the last when Sennusert II was king, and the designs are all inlaid, never of fused enamel. In one of these there are no fewer than 170 pieces of cut stone. Nothing like it is made nowadays, and the best Parisian jewelers say they could not hope to imitate the work. The reason is that this was government work in which neither cost nor labor was regarded. The collection is priceless and only in the Cairo museum is there anything to equal it in antiquity and beauty.

'No Suffrage Bill,' Asquith Tells Deputation

PREMIER H. H. ASQUITH

WILLIAM A. BRADY

LONDON, July 11.—William A. Brady, the producer, is disgusted with the English stage this summer. He said today: "In one of the most successful plays now running here, 'The Dark Beauty,' the conventional cap of tea is brought on. Just think of that. In many other plays they should bring on some whisky and fill up the actors, so that they might get some semblance of human emotion."

There is a frightful lack of good acting on the English stage and a frightful lack of originality in the music halls. The fault is not with the actors but with the dramatists, for after all an actor cannot put life where no life exists.

The indications now are that the English stage is returning to melodrama. Instead of the Drury Lane theater being practically its only home, melodrama will be produced here long at all the smaller theaters.

King Albert Has New Motorcycle; Lover of Speeding

BRUSSELS, July 11.—The inhabitants of this capital are soon to see their sovereign speeding along on a fast motorcycle. King Albert has just accepted one of the most powerful machines. He is the first king to own one of these machines, although King Alfonso of Spain is expected to follow his example soon.

The king of the Belgians, who is a keen motorist, has chosen a four cylinder machine with an English finish. Nominally it gives seven horsepower, but in practice it will develop nine and a half. King Albert does not often take the wheel of his cars, but he regards driving in a different light when he has a motorcycle capable of covering 70 miles an hour in his possession.

GERMANY TO DEVELOP ITS VAST CANAL SYSTEM

BERLIN, July 11.—Plans are being laid for a further ambitious development of Germany's already admirable canal system. Experts are starting a study of all phases of a waterway to connect the Rhine with the North Sea through German territory.

KAISER BROKE; CAN'T BUY RED CROSS TRINKET

NOT ALL KINGS AND EMPERORS ALWAYS HAVE PLENTY OF SPENDING MONEY; CZAR PUTS BAN ON DRINKING IN ARMY

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, July 11.—It is an utterly erroneous idea which some people possess that kings and emperors always have plenty of money. Only a few days ago the kaiser had to admit that he had not a single cent in his pockets when tackled by a pavy of pretty girls selling trinkets on behalf of the Red Cross society. It was a rather embarrassing situation for the kaiser and they were sadly lacking in enterprise by neglecting to offer his imperial majesty a month's credit. But the kaiser came to the rescue by borrowing money from willing lenders in his staff and one carnation cost him two and a half dollars.

At the moment the kaiser is enjoying his summer vacation which began with Kiel week. He will return to Swinemünde early in August to prepare for the greatest war game ever played in Germany. This has been called the "Kaiser maneuvers" and when the German army, or a very big part of it, assembles in the Tannus valley, the third week in September they will operate under the eyes of four kings and a king-to-be. These include the kaiser himself, his royal allies of Saxony and Wuertemberg, King Constantine of Greece, and the Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. More than 200,000 men with a corresponding force of horse, guns, airplanes and aeroplanes will wage four days warfare round Bad Homburg, which will be the maneuvers headquarters.

Czar to Suppress Drinking.

From St. Petersburg also I learn that the czar has issued most stringent orders for the suppression of the drink evil among his soldiers. Officers are forbidden to drink vodka in camp, on maneuvers or while on any duty with their men. All causes of drunkenness are to be dealt with in severe manner. Commanding officers are ordered to discourage the drinking of alcohol and are recommended to set the example themselves. Officers commanding regiments are ordered to improve the moral life of the officers under them. The introduction of games, the addition of libraries to the mess premises, no facilities for the study of foreign languages are especially recommended.

Vodka is forbidden to the men at all times, and the most stringent measures will be taken to prevent them from buying it. No soldier will be allowed to receive money from home, if he is known to be inclined to drink, without special permission from his commanding officer. Commanding officers are especially recommended to improve the lot of the men by instituting games which will keep them out of doors and occupied during their free time.

Special orders also are issued for the spiritual welfare of the men, especially those young soldiers who may be addicted to drink. Medical officers are to deliver lectures periodically to officers and men on the harmful effects of alcohol.

Dark Beauty First Time in History Is Now the Favorite

LONDON, July 11.—For the first time in many years, the dark beauty is all the fashion this season. Indeed she has been carrying all before her and it is she who has made the most brilliant conquests in matrimonial affairs. This is why beautiful foreign girls are having a special success. For 50 years or more the fair damsel, with the lilac and rose tints in her cheeks, has scored all along the line, and those who did not possess her coloring were disposed to attend to it by artificial means. Now fair women are for the first time since the days of Byron, endeavoring to give themselves the charm of brunettes. A special powder which hails from Paris is being sold, guaranteed to darken the complexion by two or three tones, and some women are even darkening their hair.

WORLD VICE MEETING HELD AT PORTSMOUTH

Delegates Present From Many Countries; England Leads Far in the Rear

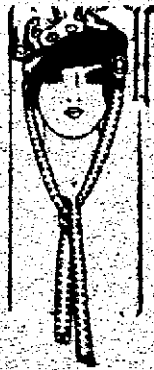

LONDON, July 11.—A great gathering of delegates was present at the Portsmouth conference to further the schemes of the international abolitionist federation to do away with prostitution and toward the appointment of police women in England. It was the first of the series of the sessions that Great Britain takes away behind the United States and Germany in this respect.

A number of prominent internationalists were present, including M. Yves Cuyot, the well-known Frenchman; W. C. Dawson of Hull, England, and Frau Scheven of Germany, who has done yeoman work for her country in this peculiar. Among the prominent speakers was Bronson Reynolds, late prosecuting attorney for the county of New York, who declared, amid loud cheers, that the surveillance of immorality "must not be left in the hands of the sex most disposed to maintain a double standard of morals."

After dealing with legislation in South Africa, and the attempt to blacken the character of nurses and servants by subjecting them to registration and inspection, Mr. Dawson suggested the establishment of night courts on the line adopted in New York. On the subject of women police, Frau Scheven gave facts and figures of the great work done by the gentler sex in this unenviable department and added that at Mayenod a woman was at the actual head of the moral department of the police force. As a result of the employment of women police, she predicted that the regulation system in Germany would "bleed out through the elimination of vice."

MMF. SIMCOX'S COMMENTS ON THE FLUCTUATIONS OF THE MODE DESIGNER & CREATOR OF FASHION

It would be interesting to learn how the dress of the moment strikes those who have been away from ultra-civilization for some years. Although their view would scarcely be an impartial one, still one feels that the main impression left would be that of a certain determined voluptuousness of expression. This is the more marked perhaps in the evening attire, in which the most daring efforts are essayed. It is only really possible to get the full trend of the vista prevailing at some large assemblage, where detail is lost in bold general outline. And it is the silhouette that marks the hour out for special comment.

For years we have been talking of picturesque dress, but it has never really arrived until now, speaking from a strictly high standpoint. The deeply decollete throats, the quaint and diverse collars and sleeves, alone provide food for the deepest reflections. Looking backward over the past short twelve months, almost it seems as though these two items bulk larger in important value than any other part of the dress scheme. Yet, again, take foot-gear, with its amazing demands, not only for choice expressions, but in quite diversity. While to run to the other end, there is millinery more fantastic, more attractive and stamped by an individuality of intention the parallel of which history fails altogether to supply. In my opinion we have not yet touched the zenith of the picturesque of dress.

Draperies that recall a Tanagra figure are allied to bright scarves that imitate those of a Spanish dancer or a cash that is akin to a Japanese obi, whilst short coats and headless hats are inspired by the Directoire or First Empire periods. But the picturesque modes find their truest expression in the lingerie gowns, and very charming are the little colored silk blouses, cottees, or casquins, or whatever name one likes to call them, when worn with a lingerie skirt of embroidery, crepon or pique. These casquins are simplicity itself, short basque affairs with crossing fronts, and kimono sleeves carried down to the wrists, tight fitting below the elbow, and finished with a fine mousseline collar round the turn down neck. In delicate tints of old rose, Nattier blue, or lettuce green, these little cottees are delightful in the plain Bengaline taffetas, but prettiest of all perhaps in the old world flowered or sprigged silks, which have been so happily revived. Revived, too, in other materials than silk. The flowered crepons are equally charming in their way, and made up in straight tuniques en chemise over a plain underdress and broadly sashed at the waist, they hold a prominent place for tub dresses this summer. We can see almost their exact counterparts worn by the beauties whose charms Hopper portrayed so often.

As for tunics—the abandonment of the short tunic has by no means come to pass, but it is doomed. The long and facing tunic, the chic thing and of this style there are many variations. An interesting evening gown that I have designed has a tunic that reaches almost to the ankles in the back. In the front it is shorter. And it flares decidedly about the hem. The foundation gown is of white charmeuse (incidentally I still find charmeuse one of the most acceptable fabrics for evening gowns), the tunic is of black tulle, wired about the bottom and finished with jet beads. This flaring tunic is run with very fine tucks. Long tulle sleeves and just above the wrist in a double net frill. The sleeves that ends just above the wrist is often awkward in appearance, comfortable as it is to wear. The double frill of net is a good finish for such a sleeve, for it gives just the softening touch necessary. Reverting again to the tunic, one of the most novel fabrics in which it finds its best expression for evening gowns, and which is made up usually over Bengaline taffeta or charmeuse, is a net embroidered with minute beads, forming flowers as though in cross stitch as our grandmothers worked their samplers. The beads are subsequently painted, and allowed to dry on, leaving a somewhat rough surface.

Some of my prettiest evening gowns are of composite colorings—yellow, blue and pink being laid over each other. A quaint little tango frock is of brilliant pink nylon and pale dull mauve, with a charming oval of black velvet heavily bordered with several shades of both the pink and the mauve, which yields an unto own coloration, as the pink is very strong and slightly bluish in tone, and the mauve very chalky and opaque. For some time I have been favoring a beautiful shade of blue, blue in all tones, but especially to the fore of late, but in no particular, and which appeals strongly to the woman of artistic disposition. Was a grey tone in it far from read from turquoise. It is one of dark sphère. It is for the most part a beautiful color, that is, a very soft blue, and in shades of white and black with a touch of grey. I have a dark color, blended in the most afterglow of old rich lace, as shown in the illustration, even in the most delicate of the lace, the construction is a dark—purple tone of charmeuse, while the tunic is of smooth grey tulle embroidered in mingled shades of grey with a hint of dull gold and old rose. The full graceful tunic falls over a blue underskirt which is drawn in very tight at the ankles. The belt, which is of old rose, is lowered considerably at the back and is finished with a huge flat bow. The corset, a blessing of blue and grey over white mousseline de soie, is bordered in a conventional design to match the skirt and is draped in such a way as to give the effect of a flat. Take all the a—last afternoon gowns, this model has the tight fitting long sleeves finished with two shaped cuffs. The cap, which is of the same shade of blue as the gown proper, has a narrow—ing of outch—lithers and is tied with old rose—de de soie. V—art in the—ill black satin V— with co—up——and a tiny full plume falling over the left.

of the gown is the black moire corselet which is draped across the lace waist and allowed to abruptly descend at the back. An Oriental chain in ancient barbaric stones of various colors falls from the shoulders and catches up the skirt drapery on either side of the lace panel which trails off into a fish tail train. The study in black and white is carried out in the black moire underskirt. A magnificent gold comb studded with barbaric stones and shaped somewhat on the form of a double harp is used as a unique head-dress.

This is a season of panniers, puffs and frills and laces of daintily flowered plateau hats and floating ribbons. A quaint, afternoon gown typifying the picturesque mode of the moment in regard to flounces, is shown in my third illustration (Fig. 3). This model is in a soft supple taffeta of that rich shade of old red wine, the beautiful tone that has a suggestion of purple in it and the soft bloom of the grape on its surface. The three tiered flounced skirt is made over an underskirt of fine parchment tinted lace. The little bolero is trimmed with camden embroidery in scroll design, and the same beautiful embroidery is brought down in low points over the hips. An up-standing frill of tulle finishes the neck. Mellow tinted cobwebby laces are in great favor, but then again I am using a quantity of coarse lace. Lace makes an ideal underskirt. An exquisite gown in rose petal pink charmeuse has an underskirt of very fine gold lace. The gold lace is also used for the making of the underbodice and a band of the same lace draws in the little low puffed sleeves.

The taffeta gowns which button straight down the front, six inches below the belt, with darts over the bust and seams at the side and back, remind one very forcibly of the dresses of long ago. Quaint and charming are these dresses, especially as they are not exactly tight fitting; in fact, some models I have designed have a very loose effect and are to be worn over a corsetless figure. The tunics are invariably long with this style of gown, occasionally are they of the apron variety and usually worn over the tight narrow skirt, which closely resembles pantallettes. Fig. 4 is another very good suggestion of an old style of skirt which has come to life again.

This is made in a dark blue Bengaline taffeta. The long basque bodice is quaintly decorated down the front with small blue silk tassels with green ball tops. The back of the bodice, which is cut on loose lines, is drawn in at the waist with a large jet buckle, and the drapery is left to fall to a point. The three-quarter length sleeves fit the arm quite snugly and are finished with a frill of lace through which given metal threads are woven. The same metallic lace is employed for the collar. The pleated skirt is cut on strictly tailored lines. The tunic is not over full, and a new idea is shown in the shaped uneven hem.

Small hats still hold away in the millinery world. Small? Is not that rather a broad statement? It can be questioned. The hats look as though they begin by being small and then half way through they change their mind and burst forth into largeness such as wide tulle frills, enormous of silk, quills, luxurious fantasies and other aspiring trimmings of the same kind. As one customer laughing remarked to me the other day, "I look as though they had placed my lips together and said something like 'plish'." That is true, but there are others that are as demurely clever as Jane Austen, for such is the personality of a hat that one can visualize it into a person. Personally I am not at all in favor of the eccentric modes in the way of chapeaux. A hat can make or mar a costume, and great circumspection should be shown in this particular part of the toilette. All models have a distinctive chic and ultra conservatism of design. At first glance some of the hats one sees look woefully ridiculous, spiky tufts of feathers stick out at all angles, others have small tufts laid round the brim anyway and anyhow, whilst others again have ribbon bows or plumes quite a foot in height placed right at the back so that the weight is all dragged to the back of the head. The higher class milliner condemns these outbursts of eccentricity and reverts to the rather pliant type of millinery whose narrow lines from back to front are most in accord with the silhouette of the moment. I am making a very smart white satin hat, trimmed simply with wings or an artistic trimming of white mousseline de soie and a broad white contour. There is the high crowned small brimmed hat on the Louis XIV. order, and an extremely smart oval shape with rounded brim, the Breton sailor hat is in evidence. This carried out in white is extremely effective when trimmed with ears of white wheat. The shape lends itself very well to this particular garniture.

Some of my prettiest summer hats show a covering of the crown and brim with floral silks and cretonnes. This style calls for little or no trimming, perhaps a twisted band of ribbon in plain coloring or a little tight bouquet of small flowers. Spiky clusters of flowers are smartly placed on small shapes, when they are placed correctly, whilst a lighter adornment is the tulle couteau, or plume, the tulle gathered into a diamante or jet rib down the center. Another model is a fine white hair straw, so soft and flexible that it can be crumpled in the hand without losing its shape and as transparent as glass. This hat, which has a low rounded crown and a fairly wide brim, is trimmed simply with clear blue Liberty ribbon. Hat brims in two tones of pleated tulle are very charming. And hats entirely composed of tulle are delightfully light and picturesque. A creation I have lately designed is a modified helmet in form. Once a wired shape is seen, tiny frills of tulle in a deep violet shade, and picked jauntily on one side is a buttery box of gilt ribbon.

Gift Box

THIS is the time to get out the gift box. A gift box, well drawn in the bottom of the wardrobe, and this is how it works, and it works just as well for the gift boxes as for those who go away. These are the days of baggy pants, of party parties, and of bargain sales. There are so many things one picks up that would make pretty Christmas gifts. A set of socks that you bought at the town sale, the top in heavy paper, put it in your gift box and label it. Money. When you find your Christmas money for a child, take a bit of embroidery, a handkerchief, a waist towel, or dainty gift, and finish them, also be labeled and put away in the box. The shape that now are all made with dainty satin. These boxes, when buckles, an old picture, or all be put up for a long and these too, being put away for Christmas. Cool Sunbonnet of Voile

Remnants of the pretty, lacy voiles with their dainty, busy patterns may be used for making charming little sunbonnets for the little daughter. Sunbonnets are made of various materials, but they are not always cool, especially if they are made of heavy linen or tulle, because the shade frame must be made of the material, and perhaps lined with butter's linen. In addition to keep the shape. A voile sunbonnet is a very cool, even when the material is folded, as it is quite transparent. As outlined by wire along the edge keeps the shape and a dainty Valenciennes edging frames the face. The strings should be of the material, while the fineness of the back can be held by two little rosettes and a band either of black velvet or colored ribbon.

MISS NORRIS REPLIES TO NEEDLE QUERIES

Colored Luncheon Sets.
MS. W. T. D. All the embroideries are showing a touch of color and with all white is always correct and in good taste. The sets with color are really very attractive, especially for use during the Summer.
An oyster white linen of rather firm weave, embroidered in Delft blue or rose shades, makes a delightful change from all white. Ten linen luncheon sets with scalloped and a circle of dots in brown seem particularly made for the Summer bungalow. A very cool effect can be secured with oyster white linen, embroidered in forest greens. A set of this kind, too, is very appropriate for Summer cottage use.

The braid must be even and firm, but not hard or quincy. As the work proceeds, the new strands are added, and the ends are clipped close after the new one is well started. After the plaiting is done, the braid is pressed with a rather good iron. A hot one would take the "kiss" out of the raffia, leaving it very limp.
The braid is then ready to be fashioned into a hat, by sewing the braid around and around, using raffia and a raffia needle. After a little experience almost any shape can be copied.

A New Collar and Cuff Set.

Anna L. A novel and new design for a collar and cuff set consists of fruit motifs placed at regular intervals along the edge, connected with straight, even buttonholing.
The cuffs of these sets are especially smart. Just a straight band, with a new edge, rounded at one end; the fruit motif being placed where the cuff is rounded.
The embroidery is always done in a simple way, such as satin stitch, damask, or long and short stitch, with bright colors. They are made of batiste or organdie and look particularly smart on crisp, white blouses. A charming design of a sort, worked in red and green, with brown buttonholing, was seen on a brown crepe de chine blouse. It would also be attractive on a green blouse or gown.

Square Motifs.

J. D. The square motif can be fitted with laid satin stitch by taking the first stitch from corner to corner, across the diagonal and then laying the stitches on one side parallel with the first stitch until the corner is reached. Then fill the opposite side in the same way. The center diagonal serves as a guide to give the correct slant to the stitches.
The triangular forms are worked in the same way, just as though they were half squares, divided on the diagonal.

Bohemian Lace.

M. E. The Bohemian lace is one of the very simplest to make, but in order to secure good results it should be evenly and carefully made. This lace is among the new things of needlecraft and because the work is quickly accomplished it will no doubt be popular.
The lace is made with ribbon braid, which is basted to a cambric pattern, following the outline of the design. Where the braid is curved it is whipped along the inner edge so that it will not become pulled and lose the curved appearance. The cambric pattern is basted over oilcloth or heavy paper, which holds the work flatter so that it is more easily done.
Sometimes only one stitch is used to fill in the background. This resembles (according to its name) the zig-zagging of the braid to another. The stitch is taken into the braid, just as is a hemming-stitch. The two threads are then caught together in a tight buttonhole knot, which holds the stitch fast.
In some of the designs other braids are combined with the bobbin braid and other lace stitches, such as the Brussels net are employed. The lace has a very fine delicate look and is very distinctive in its construction.

Water Bottle Cover.

Mrs. B. One of the little embroidered novelties for Summer is a carafe cover. It is merely a strip of white linen, scalloped along each side and hemmed at both ends. The usual and only decoration is an embroidered monogram, which may be very simple or elaborate, as desired. Small pieces of lace are fastened at each end, so that the cover can be tied around the bottle.
This cover solves the problem of making the carafe easily handled, as it is often put on the table just as it comes from the icebox.

Raffia Hats.

Mrs. A. L. The raffia hats that were made in the macramé knot stitch looked so difficult that an amateur seldom attempted them, but the very newest raffia hats are so simply made, that an outing hat at least can be fashioned by one knowing only a little about raffia work. These hats can be made of any color and are nice to wear with Summer gowns for they can be formed into fashionable shapes and attractively trimmed. The outing hats, however, are more easily formed. They are also light and durable, and so make the strongest appeal at this season of the year.
The hats are made of plaited raffia, which is woven in a long braid, twelve or fourteen yards being necessary for one hat. The number of yards depends upon the size of the hat, and the width of the braid. To make the braid, take five strands of raffia (the raffia is uneven, two or three strands have sometimes to be used to form one strand, equal size with the others), tie them together at one end, pin to a cushion of table and plait from left to right, using the strand on the left as the leader.

A Set of Dollies.

A. M. L. A very dainty and practical contribution to a dinner shower would be a half dozen small dollies. A half dozen such dollies seen the other day made of white linen, had a buttonhole edge done in white mercerized floss and a single flower motif embroidered in the center of each, with colored cottons. A brown-eyed Susan, cosmos, sweet pea, nasturtium and a cornflower were the motifs chosen, so that there would be a wide range of color. These small dollies were intended for under the finger bowls, where the flower would show through the glass. They could, however, be used for many other purposes, under fringed glasses, or on the table, or on the plates intended for small cakes and sandwiches at the afternoon tea.
These dollies are so serviceable and make such handy pick-up work, that they are a welcome addition to any linen closet.

TENERIFE LACE NOTIFS

A. H. You could apply the tenerife lace wheels to a round centerpiece. First mark a circle, a little less than the size center you wish on the line, then basin the wheel motifs through the center to the linen, following the marked outline. Buttonhole around the inner edge and then cut the goods from underneath. A monogram, inclosed in a circle and placed about two inches from the edge will add very much to the attractiveness of the piece.
If you have enough tenerife wheels, dollies to match the centerpiece could be made in the same way and a lay set of this sort would be extremely good looking on a polished table.

NEW BAGS

THE realm of new bags and what truly feminine woman is not interested in these recreations is a dainty affair in orange lined with white and drawn at the mouth with the finest flow silk cords. Primarily this was made as the model for a vanity bag, so alluring in its coloring that in changed form it is being used for kerchiefs, purses or small pieces of dainty. All of the knitters and sewers and they are innumerable Summer vacation time are providing themselves with the little bags in cut velvet, or with white linen. These bags are easier to make than the pillow or cotton froth becoming well-known flying about. They are in red and tan leather, shaped to accommodate a full-sized ball and drawn at the mouth with leather cords, which also form a hanger. The bag of buckram is drawn through the cut silk pattern's aperture. A bridge player, carries her belongings in the buckram cheque books or together with handkerchief and pencil with her in a very elaborate and capacious bag in black silk with the richly embroidered in colored silk lining with gold and silver threads. At its top are long handles in black satin ribbon, held together with rings in coral, jade or mother of pearl.

AN ALPHABET

THESE letters are adapted from an old German Gothic alphabet, that was used centuries ago. The letters are so simple and conventional they are not at all difficult to embroider.
In working the letters, pad them first with darning yarn, then work with the satin stitch, with the threads either directly across the letter, as in the monogram A, M, D, or at a slight angle as in E, or follow the angles of the letter, as in the small sketch of B.
Either one initial may be used, or a monogram. The letters are two inches high and suitable for marking table covers, napkins, towels, sheets and pillow cases.
A wedding gift of linen should be marked with the initials of the bride. For the woman who is married, use her initials, though the last letter should be that of her husband's surname.
The small letters on this page are for those who have monograms such as J. Von S. or B. De L., etc.
The square that surrounds the E is for those who wish to use but one initial. Trace the square and then place in the center the letter you wish to use. The letters P and Y will extend beyond the line at the bottom of the square, and in such a case, embroider the letter first and then work the square up to the projecting "tail," but not over it.
The square may be turned at an angle as in the little sketch of B. This will fit very well in the corner of a napkin, as the sides of the square will be parallel with the edge of the napkin.

DO YOU LIKE TO DARN STOCKINGS?

MOST OF US dread the necessary weekly mending. Some of us regularly set aside a morning or an afternoon each week in order to get it finished at one fell swoop. Others, however, the task for pick-up work and others still let the pile accumulate for several weeks and then wade through a task which is truly appalling. The writer knows a bride who tried this latter plan, with the result that the family's supply of socks gave out and one night when hurrying to dress for a dinner party she had to sit down at her husband's request and do her own mending, to darn a pair of socks for him to wear.
There is really a good deal of art in darning stockings, so neatly that the girls are not likely to be prominent. This is especially true in the modern expensive crease for silk hosiery, which is apt to wear into holes at one wearing where the leg pump rubs the threads.
Our grandmother's way of darning stockings. In those days it was extravagant to throw away stockings until every scrap of wear had been conscientiously enjoyed. Now it is one's ambition to be rich enough to throw away stockings when the first hole appears.
There is a dear old lady in one of our Westchester who loves to darn, and therefore, voluntarily offers her services once a week at an orphanage, of which she is a manager. She spends the day overhauling the dainty new stockings of the youngsters and is an adept at making wonderful repairs of apparently hopeless cases. With a gold eye she is the distraction of the overworked matron.
THERE is a Philadelphia mother who asked her new daughter-in-law whether she would be willing to let her, the mother, still do her son's mending although they did not live in the same house. Needless to say, the young woman was very glad to turn a more-or-less irksome task over to such capable hands and the mother's workbasket was not emptied of its labor of love.
Some people fairly "walk through" stockings at one wearing, others can wear them without a sign of wear until the fabric goes all at once in every direction.
What a girl has got to do to point that it shows a hole somewhere at every wearing so that she never feels secure when out from the feeling that an unrighted rent is showing above the shoe, it is time to think of buying a new set. Many women set aside the stockings which are mended where they show above a low shoe for wear in cold weather, when high shoes hide the mended places. While there is nothing half so untidy in a neatly mended hole as there is in the neglected hole itself, still, it must be confessed that the ankles to be trim should be flawless with a short skirt and, by the way, it is the short skirt which causes half the mischief, because the scanty cut and constant rubbing against the flaps of the shoe wears more holes in the average stockings than do shoes.

The Lifeboat A FAILURE!

The lifeboat has been proven inadequate to care for those on board a vessel in time of disaster at sea. When the Empress of Ireland recently in the St. Lawrence River the people didn't have time to get on the boat. The ship sank too quickly.

At the time of the Titanic disaster there were not enough boats. Some of the lifeboats were too heavily crowded and sank. Passengers put over the side of the mighty ship in boats were terrified as they looked down into the ocean far below, and they became hysterical as a result.

Time and again the inadequacy of the lifeboat has been discussed thoroughly. Now come English and American sea experts with a device which they say will eliminate much of the hazard of the sea. They do not condemn lifeboats entirely. They have saved hundreds of thousands of lives in their time, but they are now advancing a theory of floating rafts or decks to take the place of the lifeboat.

When there is time the floating raft can be put overboard and the passengers lowered to it as they are lowered to lifeboats. When the time is short the passengers can get on board the rafts and float away as the ship sinks. Two types of rafts have been recommended. One is a hollow raft with air chambers where people can go in case the raft is sucked under water when the ship sinks suddenly. The other is a plain deck fitted up as a promenade for fair weather where people can go for pleasure. In case of need it can be converted instantly into a life preserver.

The sea always has charm, and always has dangers. It probably always will have both. The eyes of the ship are where the lookout watches the sea for everything. A telegraph code at sea is communicated by whistle blasts on the ocean steamers. These mighty ocean liner whistles communicate with a deep-throated voice. It shows the right of way and in the ship's best method of communication in time of fog.

The United States Navy is to build at once on Fire Island, a wireless compass station to be equipped with the Telefunken system of wireless telegraphy. Wireless signals will be sent to every point of the compass each hour. Mariners look forward to the innovation with the hope that the dangers of fog, icebergs and severe storms are to be overcome by the hand of man.

If the station being built as a test succeeds, the Atlantic seaboard may be approached by navigators with great assurance of safety at all times. The station will be equipped with a high tower. Telefunken radio waves will be sent out every half hour, flashing out around a complete circle after the manner in which revolving light rays are thrown from light houses. A complete revolution will require one minute. This will be repeated five times within five minutes.

A navigator "fogbound" will be able to locate Fire Island immediately after receiving the Telefunken signals. And by the strength of the radio waves, he will be able to estimate his distance from the compass station.

INVESTIGATION OF LIVES DISASTER OF NO USE.

The investigation of the disaster to the Empress of Ireland is of no use now to save lives. It can be used only to save future lives. We may learn by our mistakes, but cannot correct them now.

For example in the hearing of the Empress of Ireland disaster C. S. Haight, counsel for the owners of the collier Storstad, said he had heard that the steering gear of the Empress had been disabled prior to the crash.

"Who was your informant?" Mr. Haight was asked.

"Quartermaster Galway of the Empress," he replied.

"Where is Galway?" was the next question.

"Gone back to England, I suppose," and there was an implied assumption that Galway had been induced to avoid giving testimony.

Lord Mersey, chairman of the court of inquiry, immediately took a hand in the proceedings, and it developed that Galway had not, as supposed, returned to England.

Lord Mersey said he did not attach much importance to the Galway story, but he wanted to get at the bottom of it. He called Captain Walsh, who was cross-examined by Haight. Captain Walsh said it had been arranged to send Galway back to England on either the Corsican or the Albatross with all the other men sent back who were not required as witnesses. Galway did not go, but came to him and complained that he had not got his laundry and had stopped over.

Later, he said, Galway had complained about the steering gear of the Empress, saying it had jammed for five minutes after leaving Father Point westbound. He was told if he had any evidence to give to go to the Canadian Pacific Railway lawyers.

When the hearing was resumed after luncheon at Galway, whose accusations Haight had related, took the stand.

He said that he had made certain claims about the steering gear of the Empress to Haight at the suggestion of the representative of a sailors' and firemen's union whose name he did not know.

HOURS ARE SPENT OVER QUIBBLING.

Many hours have been spent quibbling over just such matters in the hearing. All have been to no avail. They will not save the dead.

When the ships sink there is only one man who can profit by inquiries and that is the salvage man.

Another instance of lucky speculation in wrecks has been provided, a Melbourne firm having bought a disabled ship for $1,840 and found that it was worth $60,000. The ship was the Jean Bart, a French bark of 1,981 tons net, and she has just been saved from entire destruction and has been towed into harbor after lying a battered wreck for two months. The bark was on a voyage from Antwerp to Wallaroo, laden with 3,000 tons of pig iron and coke, when she ran aground on Wauding Island, in Spencer Gulf, South Australia. Her hold quickly filled, and it was soon impossible to float her. For two months she was in this condition, the whole part of the ship being under water. Her captain cabled to his owners in France for orders, and received a reply to the effect that she should be sold at auction.

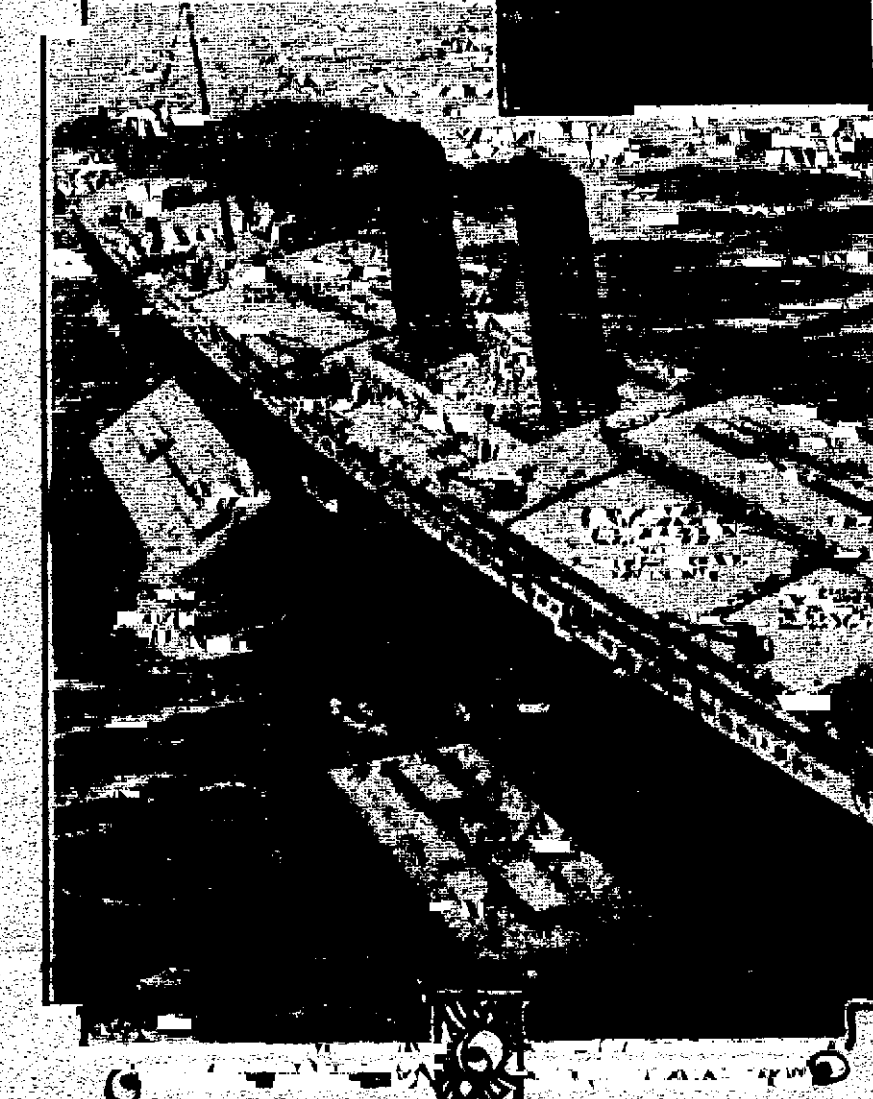

A number of Australian firms sent representatives to inspect the wreck, but none of them thought that it was worth while to buy it. It was eventually sold to a firm which had been identified as a salvage company. The firm, J. Bell & Co., again merchants of Melbourne, made a bid, and the wreck was sold for $1,840.

Some critics laughed and remarked that they were paying for a hold full of water which could not be raised. Mr. Bell said nothing, but engaged a diver to inspect the vessel, and then the news became known that the damage to the bark was only slight. A hole a little more than a foot in diameter had been torn in the bows and the diver reported that this could easily be repaired.

Work was begun at once, the water was pumped out of the hold, and the hole had been plugged up, and the bark thus lightened was towed off and beached. After that further repairs were carried out, so that the ship could be brought to Melbourne to be docked. The work was successful, in spite of a storm which right ahead the vessel was towed by a powerful tug to her destination, and now it is seen that the value of the ship and cargo is over $60,000. It is believed that before long the Jean Bart will be sailing the sea again, for she is very little damaged.

At Lloyd's a newspaper representative was informed that though this is regarded as one of the plums of the business, there have been several similar ones. "Round the shores of Great Britain every year," said a marine broker, "there are large numbers of wrecks which would yield a large profit to any enterprising buyer, provided he had the necessary facilities to sell or dispose of the property. Some time ago a steamer was wrecked off Yorkshire, and the buyer was a man who knew little about such matters, but he bought the vessel for about $1,500. It was not a big ship, but she had a valuable cargo aboard, and it was feared that the bottom had been ripped out of the ship and the cargo lost. In the case now a large number of pictures, few firms cared to touch the business and the underwriters let it go for the sum stated. But the ship was inspected and raised, and then, to the surprise of everybody, the cargo was discovered to be little worse for its immersion. The property sold for nearly $50,000.

Eat Fish and Reduce Cost of Living.

How to reduce the high cost and improve the standard of living is the dominant theme of the annual year book of the Department of Agriculture. The departmental experts make the following recommendations:

1. Americans should eat less meat and more fish.

2. Farmers of the South are the Inadequacy of Present Means of Rescue at Sea Shown in Empress of Ireland Disaster Detach- able Decks, Con- vertible Into Rafts, Are Sought people to utilize the fisheries in their own country. "We must begin to eat fish," said M. E. Pennington, chief of the research laboratory in the Bureau of Chemistry, "but one of the greatest difficulties in the way of utilizing our piscatorial resources is the ignorance of the American, especially the native born, well-to-do people, in regard to the kinds of food fishes and their desirability as foods."

The foreign-born population of the United States are the fish eaters of the nation. "Cheapness of fish is scarcely realized," says Doctor Pennington, "varieties can always be purchased for less than 10 cents a pound, which have nutritive qualities equal to the best meats."

The other method of increasing the meat supply is for the farmers of the South to raise cattle on feed stock. Farmers are also urged to feed stock the corn they raise on their farms, as this serves the double purpose of increasing the profits of the farm and maintaining the fertility of the soil. Farmers who raise stock need purchase little fertilizer.

Housewives, both on the farm and in the city, are urged to avail themselves of information for reducing the cost of living, as well as the physical labor necessary to conduct a pleasant home. Information can be obtained as to the food value of all staples on the market, the preparation of meals for various kinds of households, the planning of work, the purchase of home articles of all description and the conservation of materials and time.

The department is endeavoring to increase its activities along these lines, and invites suggestions from the housekeepers, as well as offering them.

Particular attention should be paid to the quality and purity of food, according to Francis G. Carey, solicitor of the department. The federal pure food and drug act and the meat inspection law should be supplemented by better state laws on the same subjects.

It is manifestly important, he says, for the States to co-operate with the Federal Government to avoid duplication of effort.

A Continuation
She weighed close upon 25 pounds, but she was not so strong as the crowded car, and as it stood and swayed with the movement of the car she waned "capitulated."

If there were any sentiment in the car, she said, "they would not allow a lady to stand."

And then little Dobbins set up from his seat with a sigh.

"Don't be cross, mamma," he said. "I'll make one toward it!"

Off for the Honeymoon

Off for the train in a shower of rice and old boots—the happiest shower that ever fell upon the earth. It's the one time in life when the world seems the rosiest and brightest, when everything seems bursting with the sheer joy and happiness of living.

But when the honeymoon begins to wane and the youngsters are ready to settle down in a home of their own—then begins the round of time-old problems.

First they must find a flat, unless they are going to live with the old folks. Then they must buy the furniture and what fun it is too! And the cook—yes, it is wisest to have a cook even if she did learn "domestic science" at high school.

All of these problems can be simplified by a careful study of the want ad. columns. The best flat in the city will be found listed there, if it is empty. Furniture just as good as new is for sale in these columns. And the cook, yes, you can find her there too by a little ad. of your own.

Don't overlook these little suggestions and the honeymoon will still continue to shine through all the dense clouds of reality—see if it don't.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, July 11.—Huge primary receipts, totaling with small export clearances today, explained fairly well the decline in the value of wheat. Depressed at the close, which was due to under last night. Corn scored a gain of 1 cent to 1 1/2c, and oats, a rise of a shade to 1 1/2c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to no higher.

Arrival of nearly 1,500,000 more bushels of wheat at the principal rail terminals this week than during the corresponding time a year ago, brought home to speculators the likelihood of a heavy crop. Moreover, the week's receipts at Chicago were more than double the shipments, and were in time the volume of today's export clearance from the whole of the United States.

Black rust complaints from South Dakota became more numerous and threatened for a while to unsettle the wheat market, especially as there were reports of extreme heat throughout the northwest. Actual severe damage, however, was said still to be confined to a relatively unimportant amount of land.

Intensely hot, dry weather over the greater part of the surplus producing states led to a sharp advance in corn. The crop in central and southern Illinois and eastern Missouri was said to be in serious danger. Despite heavy profit-taking sales, the market closed strong at about the top prices of the session, with July again up in the list.

Buyers in oats by elevator interests caused the July option to make an unusually steep jump.

Provisions were firmer with hogs and corn.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 11.—More low records were scored in the course of today's session of the stock market. New Haven was again the most prominent feature, declining precipitately on moderate offerings to 55 1/2c, yesterday's low of 55 1/2c. New York, Ontario & Western, controlled by New Haven, and which recently suspended dividends, sold at its lowest figure in 10 years.

Could issues, notably Missouri Pacific and Missouri, Kansas & Texas, be sold at a price reflecting the recent heavy losses of the latter, and Chesapeake & Ohio, whose future dividend policy is under discussion, again yielded to what looked like bear pressure. Other railway issues fared better, with the exception of Western Lake Erie & Western and Western Maryland.

Investment shares held their ground, except New York Central, in which recent heaviness was manifested. Trading was wholly professional, and the declines gaining some force from a decision of the interstate commerce commission directing the St. Paul to reduce rates from Minnesota to points in the Dakota for distances of 600 miles.

The day was not without its bright spots, as a whole, reflected the movement of an advance of 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 in steel wire products and greater optimism respecting general trade prospects.

Crop news helped to confirm the week's earlier advances. In the latter part of the session, full recoveries were made by the issues in which initial weakness was shown. But the explained declines in American Telephone and Telegraph company and Western Union again created unsettlement.

Actual cash loss shown by the banks was little more than $13,000,000, or about half of the widest estimate. With a reserve decrease of about $2,000,000, the whole, the exhibit was more favorable than had been expected.

Total bond sales, par value, $45,000. Bonds as a whole reflected the week's irregular movement in stocks.

From HOUSEWIFE To BUSINESS SUCCESS At 57

Mrs. L. S. Carter celebrated her sixtieth birthday in Wichita, Kan., the other day. Friends called her office or wrote her letters of congratulation. Thousands remembered her on that day and rejoiced she was alive.

Twenty-nine years ago she was an ordinary woman of good judgment, with a high sense of duty. She was well liked by her friends, but she did not try to get so many friends then. She was just an ordinary home maker with a husband and two sons. Then her husband died.

Like many other widows who have been left with fortunes by her husband, Mrs. Carter found her husband was heavily in debt. In fact, he had failed just before his death. One of the sons died soon after, and later another son died, leaving her in the world at 37 years old.

Carter would have been excused for taking a gloomy view of life. She would have been excused for not paying the debts contracted by her husband which he was unable to pay because of a financial crisis in his life, but Mrs. Carter was not looking for excuses.

As soon as she was able to plan, she decided to become a business woman and pay off her husband's debts. She sold books, as that seemed to be the only thing she could do, and was successful. She sold magazines, and people bought. She sold off all her possessions on the big day in a few years, and had enough to start a business she continued.

She opened offices in a downtown building, and increased her business. Others who had been left in the world at her age mourned their lot. She mourned, too, but she decided to erase one cause of unhappiness. Now she is 86 years old and expects to live to be a hundred.

If I get to the point where I have no use in the world, I want to die, said Mrs. Carter the other day. "I want to die and be cremated. I am a strong advocate of cremation."

I don't want to have my body in the ground after I am dead," she said. "I want my body burned and buried in a small urn where it will never harm the soil or spring water that might run through my grave. I should be buried."

Mrs. Carter has a large income from her magazine agencies. From time to time she has established a lecture course in Wichita, Kansas, and other cities. She has been in the lecture course for the past few years, and has been able to have a cool drink of water and a good dinner while traveling along the streets.

She built a parsonage for her minister, and contributed largely to the building of Fairmount College in her city. She is exceedingly fond of her city and gives the first baby of her subscribers a silver spoon. She has her name and picture engraved on the spoon. She has shown her fondness for her city by donating to the city's home of her city.

One day a visitor at her office asked her if she would not leave the city when the weather became hot. "I am going on a long trip some day," she said. "Just now I am busy. I work fifteen hours a day. My creed is to be everlasting. I want to be kind to make the world better because I am here."

One day a man entered her office and paid four years' back subscription. Another called in the office and asked her how she allowed the subscription to run behind. "He is the one who ought to employ a secretary to collect the back subscription," she said.

"I have enough," she said. "If I fail to pay, I pay for them and make them a present of the magazine until they can afford to pay. They want to pay up back subscriptions then it is all right. I would rather make them a present of their magazines than to pay a collector."

DOES ANYONE CAN START AT ANY AGE.

Mrs. Carter is a living proof that one can start at any age to make success if they have intelligence, faith and will. There are other examples like her in the country. Thomas Parr was the progenitor of the most remarkable family for longevity on record. The famous Harvey facetiously remarked concerning the old gentleman, "After making an autopsy on the day that he might have added a few more years to his life had he continued some of his high living."

He married first at the age of 33.

years. By this union two children were born. Apparently the old codger had not sown all his wild oats, for at the age of 102, while his first wife was still living, he fell in love with another woman.

Shortly before his death Parr was taken to London by Thomas, Earl of Arundel, and presented to His Majesty. This proved the downfall of the old man, for from country fare to high living and excessive drinking was too much for him, and he passed away at the untimely age of 133 years. An autopsy showed his body in almost perfect condition.

The Countess of Desmond, 145 years old, was obliged to flee from the house of Desmond, and made the journey from Bristol to London without injuring her health. She died a pauper. Lord Bacon was credited with saying that this remarkable woman had renewed her teeth two or three times.

Jonathan Hartop, who quit this world in his 138th year, had much to show for living that long. He married five times, and as a result of these unions seven children were born. From these came the following offspring: Twenty-six grandchildren, 74 great-grandchildren and 140 great-great-grandchildren. He ate little, but was particularly fond of milk. Within a few months of his death he was able to read without the aid of spectacles and could play cribbage like an expert.

It was said that when Milton was a young man he borrowed $250 from Hartop. The poet later returned this money after obtaining it with great difficulty. Hartop would not accept it, but Milton insisted, and wrote a somewhat tart note declaring he had not taken the money as a gift, but as a loan, to be returned with interest. This letter, it is said, was in Hartop's possession when he died.

Among those of past ages who have accomplished remarkable things in an advanced age are:

Darwin, author of "Origin of Species," written at the age of 50 years.

Immanuel Kant, author of "Critique of Pure Reason" at the age of 57.

Herbert Spencer made a rough outline of his "Sympathetic Philosophy" when 40 years old, wrote "Principles of Psychology" when 52 years old, and "Justice" at 71 years.

Richard Wagner accomplished more after the age of 50 years than before. The entire "Nietzsche Ring" appeared when he was 50 years old, and his "Parsifal" was written when he was 54 years old.

Haydn composed "The Creation" at 67 years of age and the "Seasons" some years later.

Christopher Columbus was 56 years old when he discovered America.

Goethe did most of his literary work after he had reached 55 years. Probably his greatest work was "Faust," a second part of which was written when he was 80 years old.

Among others who did brilliant work between the ages of 40 and 50 were Humboldt, Lord Kelvin, Faraday and John Fleke.

As an example of wonderful physical ability there is none who is better fitted to be named among the greatest of Americans than the pediatrician, Edward Payson Weston. He is 75. Three times he has crossed the continent on foot, and most of the walking has been done after he was 50 years old.

Here are some recent figures of a German statistician:

The German Empire, with its 68 million population, has 78 persons who have passed the one hundredth birthday.

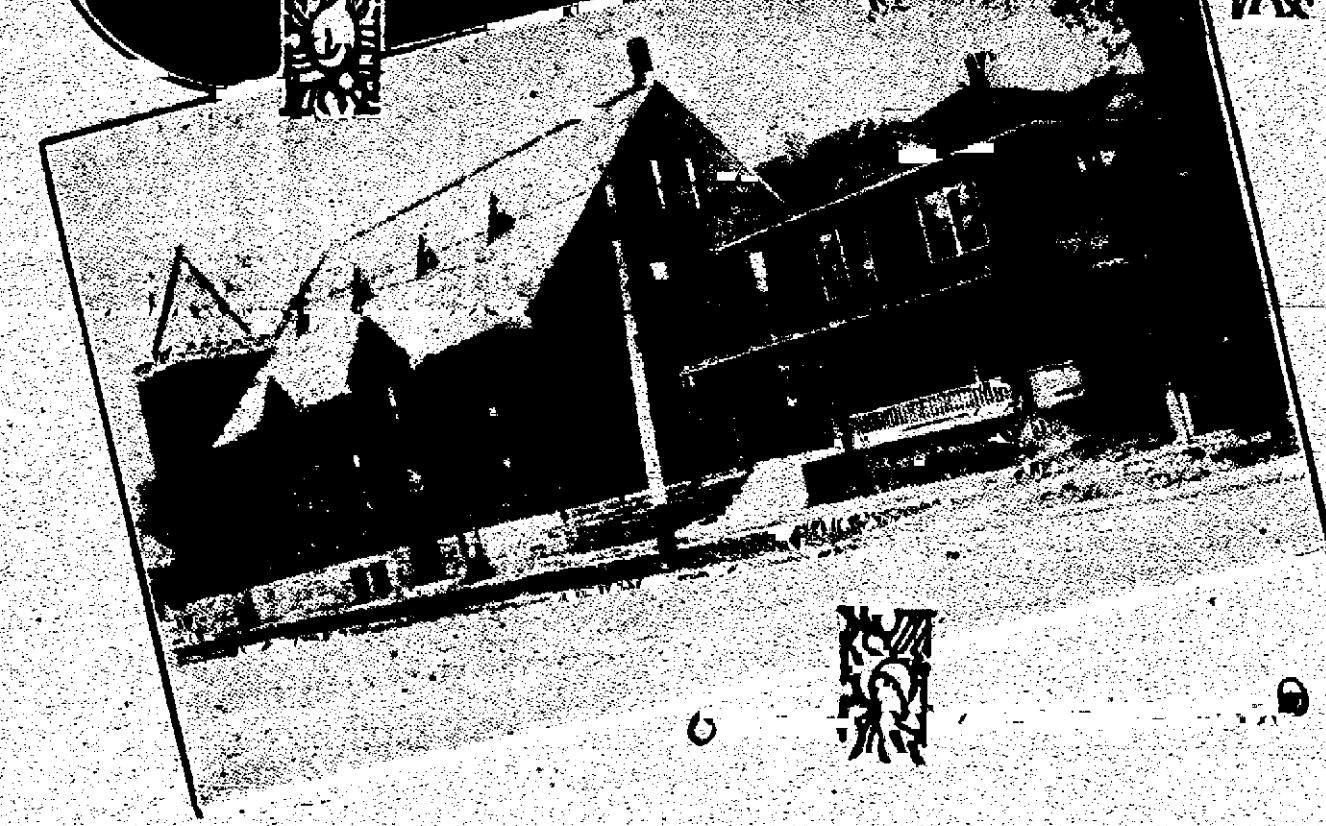

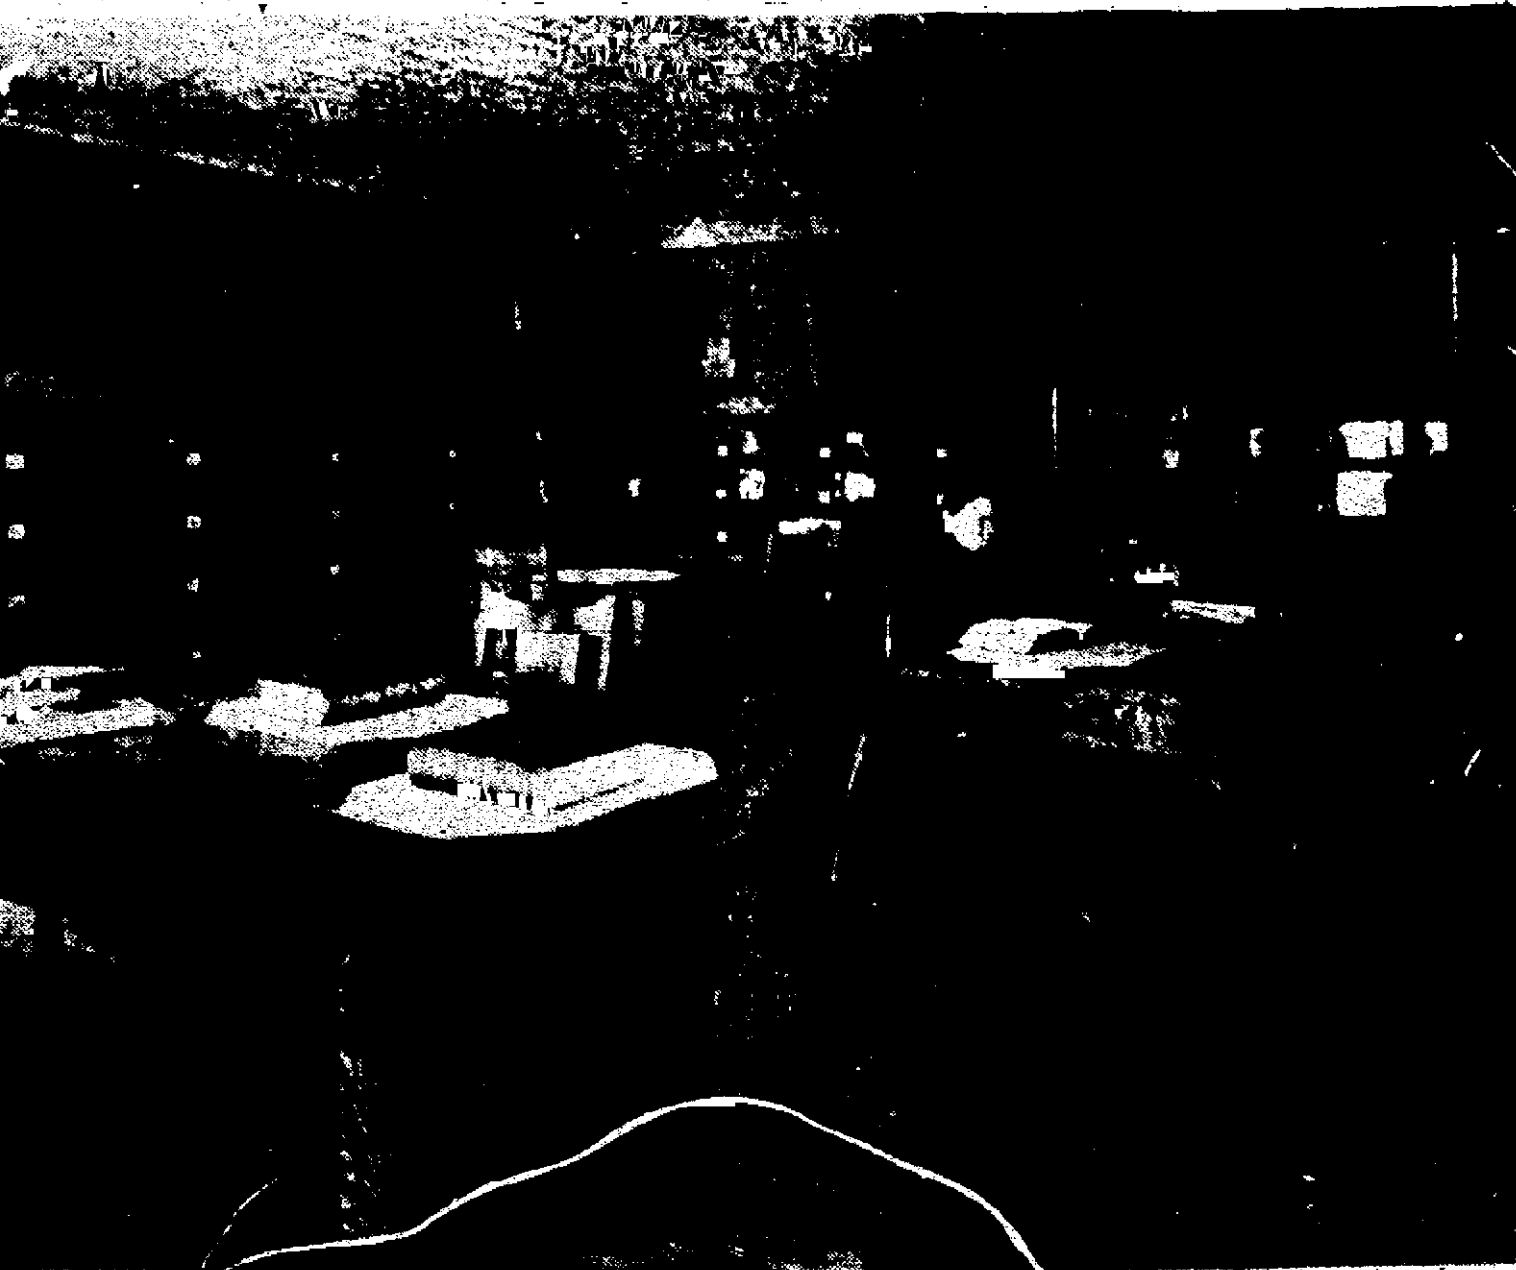

France, with 40 million inhabitants, has 213 centenarians.

Spain, with 18 million population, reports 410 persons over the 100-year mark; England reports of 140; Scotland, 40; Norway, 22; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 8; Denmark, 3.

Figures from the British general's returns show that in 1911 there were twenty-four persons living in London 100 years old or more.

Switzerland does not claim a single 100-year-old person.

Figures collected on the subject for all England by Haller, a famous statistician, are as follows:

mighty persons from 110 to 120 years.

Twenty-nine persons from 120 to 130 years.

Fifteen persons from 130 to 140 years.

Six persons from 140 to 150 years.

One person celebrated his 159th birthday.

The following amazing figures show longevity in the Balkans:

Servia has 373 persons over 100 years old.

Rumania has 1,684 persons over 100 years old.

Bulgaria has 3,381 persons over 100 years old.

According to these statistics Bulgaria holds the international record. The fact that the Bulgarian mountaineers are fond of consuming large quantities of sour milk has led scientists to the conclusion that sour milk and old age go hand in hand.

Persons have been known to attain a ripe old age by living careless lives but these cases are rare. Hygiene plays an important part in longevity, but there are several astonishing exceptions to this rule.

One Scotchman who died at the age of 110 is reported to have been drunk almost every night of his young life.

Prof. G. F. Butler of Chicago gave a lecture and the following is the synopsis:

"After 40 eat less and eliminate more. Drink much pure water."

"Many people suffer from too much business and not enough health. When such is the case they had better cut out business and society for a time and come down to earth and milk and first principles."

"Don't be foolish. Play more. Indulge in less fret and fume and more fruit and fun."

There are three well-known attorneys in Linn and Macon Counties, Missouri, one of whom has just turned 80, and the others are not far behind.

Major B. R. Drart, the oldest of the three, was admitted to the bar in 1835, the birth year of Macon. He was born in Howard County, Missouri, April 12, 1835, which made him 80 years of age the 12th of last April. On that occasion the major's friends tendered him a little celebration, and in responding to

These men, born when the last century was young, are still doing the world's work in the century that followed theirs. They have not retired to that restful realm of consulting and office lawyers, but travel about from court to court, from one end of the State to the other, and fight out their battles before judges and juries with all the fire and intelligence they did fifty years ago—with greater intelligence, because they have grown in the law, and have held to the intellectual fields they have conquered.

"Some of my friends have accused me of having tried to conceal my age. Tonight I feel a good bit like Gen. John B. Henderson once expressed it: 'Before I was 80 I kept my age hid; after that I bragged about it.'"

The other members of the distinguished trio are Major A. W. Mullins of Linn and Capt. Ben Eli Guthrie of Macon. Major Mullins was born in Marion County, Kentucky, April 12, 1835. Captain Guthrie was born on a farm near Kertsville, Mo., May 21, 1839.

All three were students of the old McGee Presbyterian College, College Springs, Macon County, and all were soldiers in the Civil War, coming out with military titles honorably won.

Major Mullins, though a year younger than Major Drart, was admitted to the bar a year earlier, in 1837.

From HOUSEWIFE to BUSINESS SUCCESS At 57

L. S. Carter celebrated her sixtieth birthday in Wichita, the other day. Friends called on her or wrote her letters of congratulation. Thousands remembered her on that day and rejoiced that she was still alive.

Twenty-nine years ago she was an ordinary woman of good sense and with a high sense of duty. She was well liked by her friends, but she did not try to make many friends then. She was just an ordinary home maker, a husband and two sons. Then she died.

Like many other widows who have been left with fortune by her husband, Mrs. Carter found her life was heavily in debt. In the year following her husband's death she had lost just before his death. One of the sons died soon after, and later another son died. She was left in the world at 57 years old. Carter would have been expected to take a gloomy view of her life. She would have been expected to pay the debts contracted by her husband which he was unable to pay because of a financial crisis in his city, but Mrs. Carter is looking for excuses.

Soon as she was able to plan she decided to become a business woman and pay off her husband's debts. She sold books, as that seemed to be the only thing she could do, and was successful. She sold magazines, and people bought. She paid off all indebtedness on the business in a few years and had such a success she continued business.

She opened offices in a downtown building and increased her business. Others who had been left with a loss at her age mourned their loss. She mourned, too, but she decided to erase one cause of mourning. Now she is 57 years old and expects to live to be a hundred.

I get to the point where I have no use in the world. I want to die," said Mrs. Carter the other day. "I want to die and be cremated. I am a strong advocate of cremation."

"Don't want to have my body buried after I am dead," she said. "I want my body buried and away in a small urn where it never again will run through my hands. I have buried."

Mrs. Carter has a large income from her magazine agencies. From income she first established a business lecture course in Wichita, Kansas, and from that she has made a fortune.

years. By this union two children were born. Apparently the old codger had not sown all his wild oats, for at the age of 102, while his first wife was still living, he fell in love with another woman.

Shortly before his death Parr was taken to London by Thomas, Earl of Arundel, and presented to His Majesty. This proved the downfall of the old man, for from country fare to high living and excessive drinking was too much for him, and he passed away at the untimely age of 162 years. An autopsy showed his body in almost perfect condition.

The Countess of Desmond, 145 years old, was obliged to flee from the house of Desmond, and made the journey from Bristol to London without injuring her health. She died a pauper. Lord Bacon was credited with saying that this remarkable woman had renewed her teeth two or three times.

Jonathan Hartop, who quit this world in his 138th year, had much to show for living that long. He married five times, and as a result of these unions seven children were born. From these came the following offspring: Twenty-six grandchildren, 74 great-grandchildren and 140 great-great-grandchildren. He ate little, but was particularly fond of milk. Within a few months of his death he was able to read without the aid of spectacles and could play cribbage like an expert.

It was said that when Milton was a young man he borrowed $250 from Hartop. The poet later returned this money after obtaining it with great difficulty. Hartop would not accept it, but Milton insisted, and wrote a somewhat tart note declaring he had not taken the money as a gift, but as a loan, to be returned with interest. This letter, it is said, was in Hartop's possession when he died.

Among those of past ages who have accomplished remarkable things in an advanced age are:

Darwin, author of "Origin of Species," written at the age of 50 years.

Immanuel, Kant, writer of "Critique of Pure Reason" at the age of 57.

Herbert Spencer made a rough outline of his "Sympathetic Philosophy" when 40 years old, wrote "Principles of Psychology" when 52 years old, and "Justice" at 71 years.

Richard Wagner accomplished more after the age of 50 years than before. The entire "Nibelungen Ring" appeared when he was 60 years old, and his "Parsifal" was written when he was 64 years old.

Haydn composed "The Creation" at 61 years of age and the "Seasons" some years later.

Christopher Columbus was 55 years old when he discovered America.

Goethe did most of his literary work after he had reached 55 years. Probably his greatest work was "Faust," the second part of which was written when he was 58 years old.

Among others who did brilliant work between the ages of 40 and 70 were Humboldt, Lord Kelvin, Faraday and John Fluke.

As an example of wonderful physical ability there is none who is better fitted to be ranked among the greatest of Americans than the pedestrian, Edward Payson Weston. He is 78. Three times he has crossed the continent on foot, and most of the walking has been done after he was 50 years old.

Here are some recent figures of a German statistician:

The German Empire, with its 63 million population, has 73 persons who have passed the one hundredth milestone.

France, with 40 million inhabitants, has 213 centenarians.

Spain, with 15 million population, reports 410 persons over the 100-year mark; England boasts of 148; Scotland, 48; Norway, 22; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 5; Denmark, 2.

Eighty persons from 110 to 120 years.

Twenty-nine persons from 120 to 130 years.

Fifteen persons from 130 to 140 years.

Six persons from 140 to 150 years.

One person celebrated his 159th birthday.

The following amazing figures show longevity in the Balkans:

Servia has 572 persons over 100 years old.

Rumania has 1,084 persons over 100 years old.

Bulgaria has 3,583 persons over 100 years old.

According to these statistics Bulgaria holds the international record.

The fact that the Bulgarian mountaineers are fond of consuming large quantities of sour milk has led scientists to the conclusion that sour milk and old age go hand in hand.

Persons have been known to attain a ripe old age by living careless lives but these cases are rare.

Hygiene plays an important part in longevity, but there are several astonishing exceptions to this rule.

One Scotchman who died at the age of 110 is reported to have been drunk almost every night of his young life.

"After 40 eat less and eliminate more. Drink much pure water."

"Many people suffer from too much business and not enough health. When such is the case they had better cut out business and society for a time and come down to mush and milk and first principles."

There are three well known attorneys in Linn and Macon Counties, Missouri, one of whom has just turned 80, and the others are not far behind.

Major B. R. Dysart, the oldest of the three, was admitted to the bar in 1858, the birth year of Macon. He was born in Howard County, Missouri, April 13, 1834, which made him 80 years of age the 13th of last April. On that occasion the major's friends tendered him a little celebration, and in responding to a toast, he said: "Some of my friends have accused me of having tried to conceal my age. Tonight I feel a good bit like Gen. John B. Henderson once expressed it: 'Before I was 80 I kept my age hid; after that I bragged about it.'"

The other members of the distinguished trio are Major A. W. Mullins of Linn and Capt. Ben E. Guthrie of Macon. Major Mullins was born in Marion County, Kentucky, April 12, 1835. Captain Guthrie was born on a farm near Kesterville, Mo., Mar. 31, 1839.

All three were students of the old McGee Presbyterian College, College Ground, Macon County, and all were soldiers in the Civil War, coming out with military titles honorably won.

Major Mullins, though a year younger than Major Dysart, was admitted to the bar a year earlier, in 1857.

These men, born when the last century was young, are still doing the world's work in the century that followed theirs. They have not retired to that restful realm of consulting and office lawyers, but travel about from court to court, from one end of the State to the other, and fight out their battles before judge and jury with all the fire and intelligence they did fifty years ago—with greater intelligence, because they have grown in the law, and have held to the intellectual fields they have conquered.

THE GROWTH OF THE DRUG HABIT

The daily lineup of criminals and suspected criminals at police headquarters is a measure of the grip of the drug habit on the underworld. The indicator stands now at 60 per cent. Those who watch this indicator with the gravest foreboding are the veteran detectives of the New York police department.

To the trained detective the news that a petty thief, a clothesline robber, a pickpocket or a purse-snatcher has begun "lifting" means that a comparatively harmless nuisance is on the way to become a reckless, brutal criminal, a menace to the life of every policeman. There is a list of officers killed by drug users startlingly long at headquarters.

Nearly every negro who is arrested by detectives shows the effect of it, and more than one-half of the white prisoners.

Just as cocaine and heroin make a decent man into a looter and a thief, they make the cowardly thief and hoodlum into a gunman and an assassin, who fears neither God nor man, and who attempts crimes which in his normal state of mind he would never dream about. Broad daylight and street crowds do not make him cautious. With his common sense dulled and his worst passions inflamed, the cocaine fiend runs amuck, oblivious even to the pain inflicted upon him by the fists or heavier weapons of the policemen.

It is a hard life, that lineup, in these days of cocaine. It was bad enough in the old days, when a line of men and women, with rough and evil faces, defiant and sullen or hopeless and frightened, were ranged along the platform. But at least there was something rugged in some of the faces.

"It gets me," said a veteran, coming out of the gymnasium after a lineup. "We used to fight criminals—bad men. Now we are fighting a drug that walks around in the shells of men. The shells do not know what they are doing half the time except that they are trying to get the money to get more of the drug. The fiends of hell only know what the drug will do when it gets a man. We cannot tell where it will break out. But looking at those faces, those hollowed eyes, pop-eyed, jumpers and jerkers, some of them half awake and others grinning like idiots, day after day, it is getting on my nerves. And every one of them is likely to be the murderer of a policeman."

"The drugged crook, remember, does not kill to escape or for revenge. He kills when he is irritated, just as you or I would slap at a fly. Joe Hyman, a coke fiend, is in Sing Sing for life for killing a bartender who refused to give him

"Those of us who have been here for years see fellows who were known to us once as 'ish workers' (pickpockets), 'pickpocket drop-pers' and 'handkerchiefs' (switchers) (swindlers of returning or newly arrived immigrants) and coalbin and washline and copper wire and lead pipe thieves, coming in here with all the human intelligence gone from their faces. They are positively ugly and their crime at the same time. I feel toward them as I would toward an ugly dog which had become sick with the rabies. It gives me the horrors."

The prisoners in the lineup do not look at each other or speak. They are not forbidden to talk—they just don't. As each one is called to the center of the platform he obeys. He shifts to show both profiles and his full face to the black masks in front of him. He answers the questions of the deputy commissioner and the inspector with some show of prompt attention. But more often than not he breaks off in the middle of an answer or makes an utterly foolish reply.

The few who do not show signs of cocaine show some interest in the examination and in the occasional identification of the human exhibit by a detective (a voice behind a mask), who has arrested him before. But the coked twist their fingers together and look at the distant wall and kick their heads and yawn and rub their noses as though they were in any other place except headquarters. The effect, whether on withered old men or on redheaded little boys of 16, is to be the same. Nothing matters except the lack of the "sniff." There is not one who is not staring for his poison.

It is no uncommon thing for prisoners to be brought to the building in an ambulance, suffering from nothing but the lack of the drug which has taken the place of their natural lives. Many are found in collapse in their cells or raving—begging for death if cocaine is not to be given to them.

Admiral Dewey, on being so plemented on his superb health, smiled, and said:

"I attribute my good condition to plenty of exercise and no banquets. One-third of what we eat you know, enables us to live."

"In that case," said his friend, jestingly, "what becomes of the other two-thirds?"

"Oh," said the admiral, "that is what the doctor says."

Foreign Preachers Teach Americans in Summer

Yearly Draft Made Upon Clergy of Britain for Service at Conferences
The Camp Meeting's Successor—The Educational and Inspirational Gatherings Which Draw Ministers From Wide Circle Summer Fuel for Winter Fires

BY THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER

The annual migration of British clergy to American summer conferences is now on; and in lesser degree a similar exodus of Americans to British pulpits. This is one of the really powerful international ties which unite the thinking of the two countries. It is an unofficial exchange of ministers in an embassy of peace and good will, like that which took place a few years ago between Germany and Britain; or like the "exchange professorships" of French, German and American universities.

A considerable array of British preachers are already on this side, but not so many Americans are invited to British pulpits. And at the famous Keswick conference there are few, if any, American speakers. Dr. Gunzale and Dr. Cadman are frequently heard on the other side, and Dr. Lent G. Broughton of Atlanta is now there permanently in the pastorate.

The balance of the account stands strongly, however, in British favor, for there are literally dozens of ministers from the other side in the pastorate of this country. Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett of Fifth Avenue church, New York, is the most conspicuous example. It is often said that America is not producing great preachers any more, but is importing them.

Some Notable Visitors.

Among the well-known ministers from Great Britain, who will deliver courses of addresses at the Northfield conference and elsewhere, are Rev. J. Stuart Holden, Rev. F. B. Meyer, Rev. Charles Brown, Rev. John A. Hutton and Rev. John Thomas. At Winona some of these same men will be heard, and with them Rev. J. Gregory Mantle of London, Rev. J. R. P. Cate of Edinburgh, and Rev. John McNeill, now of Toronto, but a Scotch importation.

B. C. B. Embroidery Club.

The B. C. B. Embroidery club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Walter Johnson, 425 North Spruce street, Thursday afternoon. After the work was laid aside a two-course luncheon was served. The ladies present were Mrs. D. F. Mublenburg, Mrs. Ren F. Moore, Mrs. Ernest L. Beals, Mrs. Earl A. Foster, Mrs. Cecil E. Rodgers, Mrs. C. R. Merryfield, Mrs. Frank Rea Russell and the hostess.

and the advance in religious culture, have all been factors in causing the camp meeting to be superseded by the summer conference.

In the south, which is slower to adopt new fashions than the north, two denominations have established great summer assemblies where they invite their members to spend their vacations. The older of these is at Montreat, in North Carolina, where the leaders of the Southern Presbyterian church and many visitors speak daily at the meetings. Varied interests of the denomination have their own special influence on the Montreat platform.

Especially ambitious is the Junaluska assembly of the Southern Methodistists near Naxeville, North Carolina. Most of these conferences are gradual growths, but Junaluska was made to order, even a great lake being created. It was first used last year, being opened by a meeting of the Layman's Missionary Movement of the Southern Methodist church.

The oldest and best known of that summer religious conferences is that which grew up about the personality of Dwight L. Moody at Northfield, Mass. There a series of conferences continue through the summer, bringing with the Men's Student conference in June, and lasting through the general conference of Christian Workers in August.

Winona, Indiana, probably ranks next in importance to Northfield, although in some particulars it has outstripped its pattern. Other flourishing summer conferences are now at Lake Geneva, Wis.; Silver Bay, N. Y.; Pocomo Pines, Penn.; Stony Brook, L. I.; Montrose, Penn.; Asheville, N. C.; and Chautauque, N. Y.

Where Preachers Spend Vacations.

The intensity of modern life leaves some preachers scant time for leisurely study, and many depend in good part for their intellectual and spiritual replenishing upon the summer conferences they visit in vacation time. These gatherings fuel for winter fires.

The ministers who address these conferences have a position of unique influence, because their messages are reflected in uncounted pulpits throughout the land. That is the principal reason why the great teachers of two continents may be commanded for these summer conferences—although the "honorarium" as preachers love to call their pay, is by no means negligible factor.

Theology in service, "al fresco" in these conferences, for they are really summer schools of popular theology. They deal with the same themes that are treated in the theological seminaries. Several of the latter, by the way, are now conducting summer schools, among them being Vanderbilt, Princeton and Drew.

Militant Orthodoxy.

Curiously, most of these progressive summer assemblies, with their enterprise and cosmopolitanism, are pronouncedly orthodox in their theology. There is no summer school of liberal theology outside of the Unitarian denomination. Northfield, censors the views of its speakers as rigidly as a boarding school for young ladies censors the morals of its visitors. One need never fear any taint of heterodoxy from the Northfield platform.

Some of the conferences like that at Montrose, Penn., gather about the personality and teachings of one particular man and reflect his views. At

Most of these conferences give time to Bible study in classes, as well as from the platform. A really serious work is done in the study of the Bible, of mission and of social service.

The study element is particularly strong in the great gatherings of college students who meet every year at Winona, Asheville and elsewhere.

Like many of the other notable phases of our modern American church life, this is a gradual and unpremeditated growth, and has not come into existence by the decree of any ecclesiastical body. It is evident that the changing forms of American church life are developing not by direction, but like Topsy they "just grow."

WILL THE RESOLUTION OF THE FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS AFFECT OUR CLOTHES?

The Looseness of the Armholes Is Giving Way to the Fitted Sleeve of the Basque Waists—Lace Tunics and Lace Caps

NEW YORK, July 11.—A great deal of talk has been occasioned by the protest made by the women at the General Federation of Women's clubs in Chicago recently against the modern styles. The resolution stated that the clothes worn were extreme, immodest and lackcompleteness than the basque. In the tightness of the armhole, and the buttons down the front, and the points at the waist this modern basque is an exact replica of its ancestor. The plain fitting long tunic skirt is a conservative model of its type and one which the woman of full figure can easily wear.

The armhole of the basque waist is snug and certainly looks almost queer, after the looseness of the kimono blouse we have worn so long and which gives so much freedom that it almost made one wonder at times if there was an armhole at all. Waists of different styles are already showing that this has an influence upon them, and are appearing with smaller armholes. A strong tendency exists towards embellishing waists in some way. For instance, sleeves are put in with a corset around the armhole or narrow lace or beading is used. This is a very pretty way of making a simple waist attractive.

From all sides we hear rumors of wider skirts and yet when we examine the models we find the largeness consists in a large quantity of material in draperies in flounces of tulle, while the underskirt or foundation remains as narrow or narrower than ever. The tendency of these things is to widen out, measuring about 22 to 24 yards in width with the fullness gathered in at the waist. This style is practical to develop in sheer and summery materials and later possibly for the development of the heavier fabrics.

The tremendous popularity of lace is evidenced in the wraps and gowns displayed of these materials for midsummer. Long tunics of lace are worn over underskirts of satin, tulle and chiffon. Coats and capes of lace have superseded those of chiffon and tulle. Skirts are made with rules of lace from hip to hem. If one is fortunate enough to possess old lace it may be used to the greatest advantage this season. Among the most popular of the lace are first and foremost, ohnally, then maline, shadow and flat lace. The old Spanish patterns are being re-ing in beauty. This was signed by 46,000 women. A delegation of women were appointed in each district to interview the manufacturers and dress-makers and request them to design and make simpler and more modest dresses. This is a heroic measure on the part of the American women, and one that is hardly apt to meet with success as long as Paris is the recognized source from which the styles of the day originate. This distinction is held by the Parisians because after all is said and done they have the ideas upon the subject of dress and are able to carry them out to advantage. Until it is decided that some other place shall be the arbiter of what we shall, and shall not wear, this protest will have but little influence.

With the vogue for the basque and polka dots, the origin of these but are modified to suit the women to whom the mentioned styles are not becoming. These last are more in line with the being long of waist and loosely belted in at the waist with belt or sash. One stunning dress of this variety is of white silk with a chiffon over-sleeve which hangs straight from the shoulders to the depth of a long little tail held in by a sash which runs through slits made in the chiffon. This is a style which is easily applied to cotton materials, such as crepe, tulle and others.

The simple but dainty designs called the polka dot and the ring have had a long period of being unnoticed or, at least, not noticeably smart. But this summer they are to be seen in foulards, in wash-silks, in cotton crepes and of course, in percale and calicoes. In the latter is a simple and attractive design made of percale with a blue ring across its surface. The waistline is the new tendency of the armhole which is growing smaller and the skirt has two charming flounces: Crisp white collar and cuffs, and crushed white lace. This is a style which can easily serve as a guide by which to plan a dress. With a skirt of striped material and a bodice of plain it would be unusual in attraction. Another way of finishing a dress would be to bind the sleeves of the sleeves, the collar and the cuffs with a color matching the flounce.

If a style revived in great-lived in borders on net foundations. The great novelty of the season's laces are the metal laces. Gold and silver laces in dainty and quaint designs combine charmingly with soft tulle and satins. Net top laces are embroidered with beads of crystal, gold or silver, and are much used for tunics of dancing and evening frocks. A dress of clunkable blue and pink has a skirt with a long tunic of net delicately embroidered in iridescent beads.

U. S. HAS EYES ON LOWER CALIFORNIA

Offers of Annexation Have Been Made to Mexican Government

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—One of the remote possibilities of the Mexican situation is conceded to be the annexation of that nation or some part of it. It has been suggested that we annex Mexico; that we annex the northern tier of states, Coahuila, Sonora and Chihuahua, and that we annex the peninsula of Lower California. This last consideration calls to mind the several previous attempts on the part of the United States to make this long finger of rugged land a part of the Union. American administrations at various times have had their eyes on Lower California, since the annexation of Texas pointed the way.

Its mountains, fabulously rich in ores and precious stones, and its waters, teeming with pearls, Lower California has long been coveted by many nations, but it has been of the United States that Mexico has been most afraid. Mexico has long since adopted a vigilant attitude with a view to keeping the United States out of Lower California.

First Annexation Attempt.

The first recorded attempt of the United States to annex Lower California was found in the correspondence between President Andrew Jackson, Forsythe, his secretary of state, and Butler, American charge d'affaires at Mexico City. It was understood that President Jackson offered Mexico $5,000,000 for Lower California and was refused.

In 1828 a small filibustering party, led by Sylvester Pattee of Kentucky entered Lower California. Some records declare they were merely hunters and trappers. At any rate nothing ever came of this first American invasion of Lower California.

The first real American occupation of the peninsula was during the war with Mexico in 1847. Troops under Colonel Stevenson occupied the territory around Todos Santos bay and Col. H. S. Burton landed with an American force at La Paz.

Pres. Polk's Message.

President Polk, in a message to congress, signed on the annexation of Lower California as an assured fact, and it was a surprise to nearly all concerned when the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo restored Lower California. The 300 Lower Californians who had flocked to the American standard naturally were persona non grata to their government and the American administration, realizing this, gave them safe conduct to the United States and later indemnified them.

The most picturesque American military invasion of the peninsula of Lower California, however, was that led by Col. William Walker, the San Francisco filibustering editor. He led armed forces into the peninsula and seized it. He set up a government with himself as president and accidentally destroyed all the records of the peninsula at La Paz by permitting his soldiers to use the paper on which they were printed to make cartridges. There was a deep intake back of the Walker expedition. Senator Jefferson Davis, afterwards head of the Confederacy, and other senators from slave states gave Walker moral support. It was said:

Slavery Question Involved.

It was at the time when every slave vote in congress counted for much. The southern senators hoped Walker would make good his expedition, set up an independent state and then gracefully come into the Union as a slave state. But Walker also hoped to take the Mexican state of Sonora, and there he failed. His followers left him when he attempted to invade the deserts of northern Mexico and he, with a small remnant of his force, finally surrendered to Colonel Heintzelman and an American company near the border. Walker was tried and acquitted.

The next attempt of Americans to gain the rugged peninsula was in 1859, when President Buchanan sent Mr. McClane as an envoy to Mexico to negotiate for the purchase of Lower California and about the same time Gen. John C. Fremont attempted to get the United States to annex the peninsula. Mexico was so jealous of these attentions of the United States to a Mexican province that she invited the Rothschilds to undertake a colonization scheme on the peninsula. It was attempted, but did not succeed in any degree.

which harmonized charmingly with the elegant effect of the silk. Black lacquered ribbon is now super-seded by white lacquer, a ribbon, and together with very little wings trim a small white hat stunningly. This is decidedly a season of white. There have been so many all white costumes so immensely popular as at the present. How sensible, for if one must be economical. It must be acknowledged that white, at least, does not fade, which cannot be said of the charming pinks and blues, which are so afflicting upon the counters of the stores.

Vests are very smart and most becoming. They no longer come down over the face in an unbecoming "maw" but just touch the tip of the nose. The diagonal effect is popular and should have a single double or triple border of tiny chenille or this velvet dots. Many novelties are shown in these, but they should be read of as novelties for the sake, some vests are shown with a tiny peacock, beetle or butterfly embroidered upon one side in natural colors. Who but the person loving to be conspicuous would care to wear one of these?

this country is Dr. Marshall H. Saville, Lobat professor of American archaeology in Columbia university. In his scientific investigations in the west coast provinces of Ecuador and Colombia he has made many valuable discoveries. His first visit to this region was made in the summer of 1905. In a communication to the International Congress of Americanists held at Valencia in 1907, among other interesting details was the following account dealing with the subject of decoration of the teeth:

"Another custom which we found in Esmeraldas, and which so far as we are aware, is not present in any other part of South America, is the decoration of the teeth by the insertion of inlays in small perforations cut in the enamel of the upper incisors. This custom of decorating the teeth with inlays of various parts of Mexico, where different settings were used. In the Mayan area, as far south as Salvador, the object most often used for the inlay was jadeite. In Mexico, for example, in Oaxaca, I have found hematite used; in Vera Cruz, turquoise has been found; and in other parts teeth with settings of rock crystal, obsidian, and a red cement have been found. We have never heard of this custom in Colombia or Peru, but in Esmeraldas, in Atacames, skulls have been found with tiny disks of gold set into the teeth in the same manner as in Mexico and Central America, with the exception of the material."

In the June number of the bulletin of the Panamerican Union, Washington, D. C., appears a review of Professor Saville's latest publication, "Pre-Columbian Decoration of the Teeth in Ecuador," in which the reviewer states that the finding of teeth inlaid with gold, turquoise, and other materials in the skulls and among the skeletal remains of aborigines who lived in various parts of the American continent prior to the Spanish discoveries has been a matter of peculiar interest. "Whether this insertion of foreign substance in the enamel of the teeth was always for merely decorative purposes or whether at times it may have been to serve a useful and has been a mooted question. The general consensus of opinion among anthropologists is that ornamentation was the sole object."

Last summer, Professor Saville returned from another archaeological trip to South America with numerous valuable specimens, among them being one of unusual interest, described by the professor as follows: A Cholo, one of the natives of Atacames, a town in the province of Esmeraldas, about 19 miles southwest of the city of Esmeraldas, found a skeleton in a burial tube on the right bank of the Rio Atacames, just above the town. The skull was found with the teeth inlaid with gold, but the finder contented himself with breaking off the superior incillary, throwing the rest of the skull away. When I visited the town in June of the present year for the purpose of making some excavations to supplement my former work, I obtained the fragment. The two upper middle teeth are decorated by the insertion of thin gold disks in cavities drilled or bored in the enamel of the face of the teeth. An unusual dental feet, in addition to the decoration, is found in the right middle tooth. This is not a right middle incisor, but a right lateral incisor, which does not belong to the jaw but was implanted to replace the middle incisor. This is such an extraordinary feature that we must weight very carefully the evidence as to its having been found in the past. Indeed, there is no reason to doubt that the replacement is a genuine triumph of the ancient dentists of Atacames."

Another skull showed teeth that had been "face-crowned" with gold, the enamel having been skillfully removed down to the dentine and the teeth being in a perfect state of preservation. So much for the Indian dentists of a thousand years ago.

CHINA AND THE CLOCK

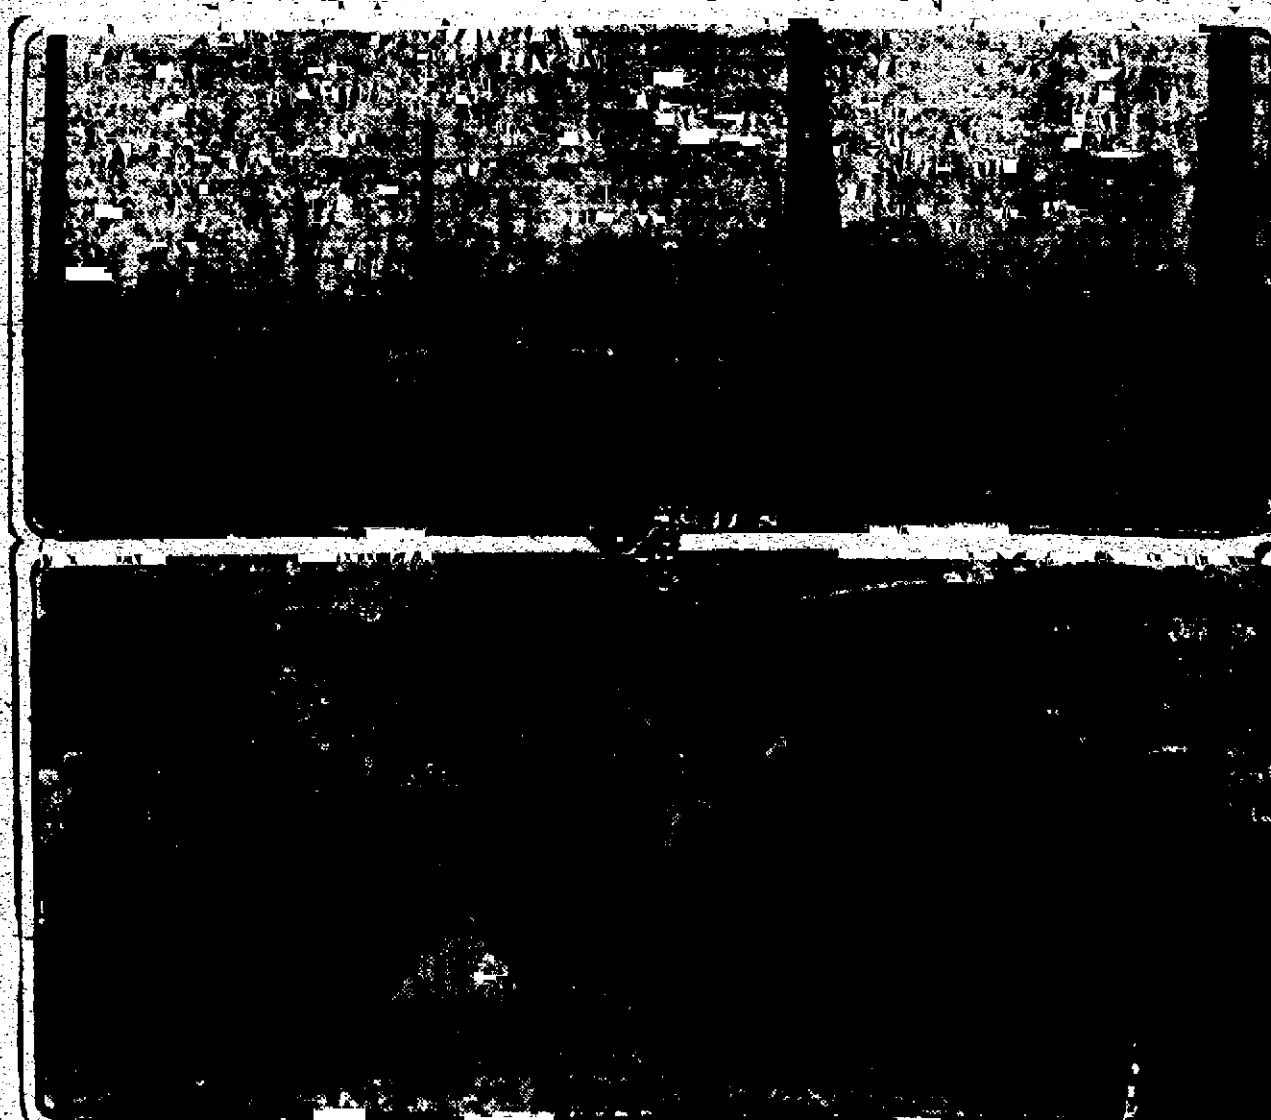

Dr. Wu Tingfang in "America Through the Spectacles of an Oriental Diplomat."

If you make an appointment with an American you will find him in his office at the appointed time.

Everything to be done by him during the course of the day has its fixed hour, and hence he is able to do a greater amount of work than many others. Chinese, unfortunately, have no adequate ideas of the value of time. This is due perhaps to our mode of reckoning. In the west a day is divided into 24 hours, and each hour into 60 minutes, but in China it has been the custom for centuries to divide day and night into 12 (shih) periods, each period consisting of two hours, so that an appointment is not made for a particular minute, as in America, but for one of these two-hour periods. This has created ingrained habits of unpunctuality which the advent of clocks and watches and contact with foreigners is slow to remove. The time keeping railway is, however, working a revolution, especially in places where there is only one train a day, and a man who misses that has to wait for the morrow before he can resume his journey. Some years ago a luncheon "tiffin" we call it in China—was given at a restaurant in Peking by a couple of friends in my room. I found that the guests there had not arrived. I considered a few dishes required. Still none made their appearance. I requested the waiter to convey my thanks. Knowing the punctuality of our people, I told the Chinese it will begin or two before the set time, when foreigners are notified of the hour. Not being aware of this device, I once attended a public meeting at the appointed time only to find that I had to wait for over an hour. I protested that I should in future be treated as a foreigner in this regard.

After studying the subject of the precision of notes in dwellings several years, a German scientist decided that the more solidly buildings are constructed the more quickly they will convey sounds.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

IF MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT
DARKENS SO NATURALLY
NOBODY CAN TELL

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grand mother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.
Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyle's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied.
Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyle's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces the soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive, besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

It has been told in words of the most positive kind, in terms rock-ing with burning adjectives and corresponding gestures, to bring home to each one, as a gospel truth the idea "That business in a general way was in a rotten state of preservation." That the majority business man was a dishonest pup, and with a very few exceptions business men of today might be a crooked bunch of highbinders.

It has been told in instalments in this town to 278,000 people--on the average 8 times to every man, woman and child living in and near Colorado Springs--Often enough to make a good many lose more or less confidence in human nature, especially in business circles.

No Better than Others

We do not wish to claim Superiority over the ordinary run of business men; "we think them an honorable bunch"--but we wish to resent, in our humble way (for ourselves only) such imputations directed at our business. We deny most emphatically that such a degeneracy exists in our store, and we think it works an injury on merchants and customers alike, to create impressions so erroneous.

Not Guilty

knowingly misrepresent anything we deal in--Our sales people are not required nor allowed to practice methods that own dignity, to make the above explanation.

EDUCATION IN THE ARMY

How Uncle Sam keeps the officers and men in his army up to the top notch of efficiency is told in a special report on "Educational Systems in the American Army" in the annual report of the commissioner of education that issued. The statement was prepared by Capt. Douglas MacArthur and approved by General Leonard Wood.
"No country in the world has as complete a system of professional scholarship training for its officers as the United States," declares Captain MacArthur. "This is due to the inherent difference between the military establishments of foreign nations and that of our own. Their armies are at all times kept upon a war footing, as a result of which they have ample opportunity for the practical training of the personnel in the profession of the military art. The main object is to train every man for the efficient performance of his duties in the grade which he holds when war comes.

A lieutenant does not dream of becoming a captain merely as the result of war experience; a vacancy is made for him in the casualties of battle. Only in the same way does a captain expect to become a colonel; nor would the idea be tolerated that great numbers of trained line officers are to be suddenly transferred to various staff positions.

"Their organizations are founded upon the theory that there is nothing mysterious in the art of war; that technical and scientific training is needed by only a small portion of military officers; that certain things which a Napoleon must know, every officer must know, and can as readily acquire as he while those things which differentiate a Napoleon from other generals cannot be acquired in any school not even in that of war.

"Such a system would be thoroughly unsound if transplanted to the American army, the organization of which is quite different from that of the European army. In fact, the most striking feature of our service is the absence of what constitutes the very essence of the foreign establishments; that is, a great standing army serving in corps, divisions and brigades, in which the average officer of any grade learns the details of his profession by practical work and with the minimum of theory.
"Our system of military education must therefore differ from that of the other great nations of the world. It must be such as to educate our officers so that they will be able at a moment's notice, when the war expansion comes, to perform the duties of far-advanced grades and to render service in branches of the army, both line and staff, in which they are not commissioned in time of peace. For this reason, we have established a progressive system of schools, designed to reach officers and men, limited only by their individual capacities for its assimilation; the duty of the man-in-arms in all grades from lowest to highest.

"The military educational system of the United States comprises: The Military academy at West Point for the education of cadets; post schools for the instruction of enlisted men; garrison schools for the instruction of officers in subjects pertaining to the performance of their ordinary duties;
the Army Service schools at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., including the Army School of the Line, the Army Staff college, the Army Signal school, the Army Field Engineer school, the Army Field Service school, the Special Service medical officers; the Special Service school, consisting of the Engineer school, Washington Barracks, D. C., the Coast Artillery school, Fort Monroe, Va.; the Mounted Service school, Fort Riley, Kan.; the Army Medical school, Washington, D. C.; the School of Fire for Field Artillery, Fort Sill, Okla.; the School of Musketry, Fort Sill, Okla.; the Signal Corps Aviation school, San Diego, Cal.; the School of Bakers and Cooks, Washington, D. C.;
the Training School for Mechanical Saddlers and for Training Mechanic of Field Artillery, Rock Island arsenal, Ill.; the School of Instruction for enlisted men of the regular army selected for detail for duty with the organized officers; the Engineer Trade school;
the Army War college, Washington, D.

C. the schools of instruction for college students, and the military departments of civil institutions at which officers of the army are detailed under the provisions of law."

THEATERS CAUSE EYE STRAIN

From the Journal of the American Medical Association.
The most frequent cause of headaches occurring during or after the theater is eye strain. People who use the full energy of the delicate eye muscles to obtain perfect vision are often unconscious of this strain. In the theater the continuous effort to keep everything constantly focused exhausts the nerve centers and headache results.
The practice of seating the audience in total darkness while they are staring into an intensely lighted stage is an other serious factor. The pupils being widely dilated in the dark, admit the excess of light from the stage, often producing irritation of the eyes which lasts sometimes for days.
Those subject to headaches should never sit where it is necessary to raise the eyes to watch the stage. This unnatural position of the eyes is very tiresome even to those who never have trouble at other times. Unfortunately the theatergoing public has not inat-tended on proper ventilation without draughts. The overheated foul air of itself, lessens the spectator's vitality and power of endurance. This, followed by draughts, frequently produces a flashing up of the nose, or cold in the head, and a disagreeable headache from internal pressure, which is usually worse the following morning.

WHAT THE CHURCH FOLK ARE THINKING ABOUT AND DOING

Sunday School Teachers and Young People's Topics

LOOKING DEATH IN THE EYE

The International Sunday School Lesson for July 12, is "Greatness Through Service," Mark, 10:32-45.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Barrie's great story, "The Little Minister," reaches its climax when the pastor of the Auld Licht church, assailed by an infuriated congregation, battled with a flood which apparently means inevitable death. In this hour he played the man so splendidly, with no thought of fear or of self, but only of his work, of his loyalty and of his love, that the tide of sentiment was completely turned. The hushed heroism shows itself in the presence of clearly perceived and inescapable death. The galleries of memory hold as treasures the pictures of the brave men aboard the Titanic who died like gentlemen rather than seek life like cravens. And now we come upon a picture of the greatest hero of all looking without blinking into the eyes of near death.

The final battle between Jesus and the priestly and Pharisaic party had been joined at the grave of Lazarus. The victory, happily speaking, clearly by Jesus' enemies. There could be only one result. He was doomed to die. There was no escape for him. He knew that he must suffer and die in ignominy. The cross was fixed on the retina of the soul of Jesus. Hear him describe what lay before him: "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death; and they shall deliver him unto the Gentiles; and they shall mock him, and shall spit upon him, and shall scourge him, and shall kill him; and after three days he shall rise again."

Striking a False Note.

That is the background of this lesson. It lends meaning to the incidents which the Sunday schools are now studying. The latter can be understood only in the light of their setting. The words are those of a man about to die. The parting counsel is the exalted admonition of a friend and teacher who was more than a father to the group about him. The scene was as sacred as a death chamber. The atmosphere was charged with the spirit of the approaching tragedy. In this hour, if ever, any little souls might be expected to rise above petty interests. To intrude trivial or ignoble themes into this occasion would be like talking millinery over a mother's bier.

Nevertheless, the opportunity was seized by the nearest disciples of Jesus to gain honors for themselves. Here again, and in the other most sacred hours of the Master's life, ambition thrust its ugly head forward. The disciples who should have been the most tender and sympathetic sharers of his passion were using this hour to assure their own future positions. Whatever the nature of the kingdom that the Lord meant to found they wanted the chief seats.

The Politician's Petition.

Shortly before President Wilson's election, a well-known politician told me that he was an applicant for an office under the administration, and when I asked him concerning the particular post he said: "Well, anything from a place in the cabinet to a position in the internal revenue service." The man saw no absurdity in his statement. He thought he was fitted for the highest post. His ambitions outran his ability. He did not realize what he asked. In like manner these disciples, James and John, made a preposterous request of their master.

Selfish interests had blinded their judgment, as it commonly does. What they asked was nothing less than this: "Grant unto us that we may sit one on thy right hand and one on thy left hand in thy glory."

Amazement at this vaulting ambition is obscured by the thought of how slight was the real understanding of the character and work of their Teacher and Friend with whom these men had companioned intimately for three years. This astounding request makes clear that they had not for a moment really apprehended the nature of their Lord and his mission. All his efforts to enlighten them had fallen upon closed and carnal ears. For that James and John asked entered into the very councils of eternity and sought to overtop the plans of the Infinite.

Had blistering and exhorting words of rebuke fallen from the lips of the Leader, we would feel that justice was being done. Yet with consideration and compassion, as a parent deals with the childishness of little children, Jesus said gently: "Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink the cup that I drink? or to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?"

And they said unto him: We are able. And Jesus said unto them: The cup that I drink ye shall drink; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized; but to sit on my right hand or on my left hand is not mine to give; but it is for them for whom it hath been prepared."

A Split in the Ranks.

Carranza and Villa down in Mexico have been separated by rivalries. Political parties have been torn asunder by individual ambitions. The temperance reform presents a divided front for the same reason. This tendency is as old as human nature. It threatened the little group of 12 followers of Jesus. When the 10 learned of the secret ambition and scheme of two, they were incensed. Their al-lent discontent over the favors shown the others now broke into open protest. They were probably no better than the others and equally ambitious. Simply the two had got ahead of them. Such was the material out of which the early church was made. We marvel that such common men as these should have been transformed into the apostles of a later day.

How was this crisis met by Jesus? Did he answer by thunders of authority and denunciation? No. Instead, he opened school and held a kindergarten class in his philosophy of greatness. He gathered the 12 close to himself and patiently taught them. "Ye know that they who are accounted to rule over the Gentiles lord it over them; and their great ones exercise authority over them. But it is not so among you; but whosoever would be great among you, shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you, shall be servant of all. For the Son of Man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Mastering by Ministering.

In the Middle Ages there was a widespread belief in the power of a talisman. Sir Walter Scott wrote a book about one such, whose touch was supposed to heal and to extract poisons. In the few lines just quoted we have a talisman for most of the ills of church and the times. It takes the danger out of every possible position and relationship.

Control those words. They belong on the fleshy tablets of the heart. They epitomize the life of Jesus. They can save the church from worldliness and selfishness; can save an efficient life from bitterness of self-centeredness; can save the ambitious from tragic failure.

To seek to serve others is to save self. Nobody is too high, too low, too powerful, too humble to achieve this real greatness. It is better to be helpful than high. Service is worthier than fame. Look down the long vistas of the centuries, and the highest of all figures is upborne above all others upon a cross of sacrifice and service.

SETTING LIFE TO SONG

Terse Comments on the Uniform Prayer Meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies, Christian Endeavor, Etc., for July 12, "The Christian Ministry of Music,"—Ps. 150:1-6.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

When deeply moved, people sing. That is why primitive races have their war songs and their tribal laments and love songs. The oldest religious literature known—the Hindu Vedas—are songs. Some of the earliest passages in the Hebrew old testament are songs. Whenever the soul attempts its highest exercise, which is worship, it bursts into song. And the promise of Revelation is that the redeemed will have a new song in their mouths, and that about the throne of the glorious company will sing "the song of Moses and the Lamb."

A song reaches farther and preaches better than a sermon.

The world has forgotten that Poplady was a famous contralto, and that his hymn was written to prove a theological dogma, but all creeds unite their hearts in singing. Rock of Ages, cleft for me, Let me hide myself in Thee.

So, also, the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte's beautiful life and many sufferings are unknown to the public, but millions have poured forth the deepest sentiment of their spirits in his hymn.

Abide with me; fast falls the evening tide; The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide.

To give the world a great song is to have served mankind profoundly. Luther's voluminous writings are mostly known only to historians, but his hymn,

A mighty fortress is our God, A bulwark never failing;

has become part of the faith of countless multitudes of Christians.

One of the religious bodies, the Friends, still clings in certain of its branches, to the belief that music has no place in worship. How far this explains the falling away of the younger generation of Friends it would be difficult to say. The two ancient preformation church, the Greek Catholic and the Roman Catholic, have always filled their order of worship with sacred music. Every revival of religion is attended with song. The spiritually moved cry with the Psalmist:

Sing aloud unto God our strength: Make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.

Raise a song, and bring hither the timbrel: The pleasant harp with the psaltery.

A sing unto Jehovah a new song: Sing unto Jehovah, all the earth. Sing unto Jehovah, bless his name: Show forth his salvation from day to day.

The persons whose childhood is not bright with memories of a Christian hymn sung by a godly mother have missed one of the priceless heritages.

A good rule for everybody living is to go nowhere and do nothing that cannot be accompanied by a song in the heart. Life may be set to music. We instinctively depend upon the person who sings at his work. And when those songs are not the empty, passing jingles of the day, but the music of the fadless gospel, they give a sacramental character to all the offices of life; they help one, like Brother Lawrence, to "practice the presence of God." The singing heart is the saintliest.

Most persons form the fabric of their thinking upon religious subjects out of the teachings of the songs they know; rather than out of the Bible itself.

President Wilson several years ago stirred up a breeze by an address, criticizing what he termed "religious ratting." He cited certain popular Sunday school songs which are meaningless and trivial and unworthy of the exalted theme of religion. The music publishers are, by their commercial zeal, threatening the purity of the music of the churches. To debate the taste of the people in the matter of religious music is an offense not lightly to be overlooked. Contrast the

Jesus the very thought of Thee With sweetness fills my breast; But sweeter far thy face to see, And in thy presence rest.

Praise is prayer perfected.

One of the most suggestive pictures in the life of Jesus is the scene in the upper room, after the last supper with the disciples. Judas had gone on his nefarious mission. The 11 and their Lord were together in the heart-breaking intimacy of a common sorrow. The Master had lifted the veil of the morrow, and let them see what awaited him of shame and death. It was the world's darkest hour. Yet the record runs: "And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives." Singing on the way to Gethsemane! A hymn in the night! Rejoicing in the face of the Passion! Who will paint this wonderful picture of the singing Christ? He is our admonition to face our fate with a song on our lips. Whatever life may do to us, it should not take away our song. There are no circumstances possible—so we are bound to say, in the light of this picture of the singing Christ—wherein a Christian may not sing praise to his God.

A child's song may bear a message of grace which the learned divine's sermon cannot carry. During the Spanish-American war I assisted for a time in one of the Y. M. C. A. tents, and we conducted nightly meetings with the troops. Near by was the division hospital, and the patients loved to listen to the music. The hymn for which they oftenest asked was "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." This is the favorite hymn in the English language. All of us at some time or other want the refuge of the tender, loving Christ. And in the soul's night watches he gives this song of comfort and peace.

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS

I like the man who faces what he must. With step triumphant and a heart of cheer. Who fights the daily battles without fear. Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering true. That God is God; that somehow, true and just, His plans work out for mortals.—Sarah K. Bolton.

THE LARGEST STORE IN JAPAN

From Japan's Message to America

The pioneer and the largest of department stores in Japan is Mitsui-koshi. It has 38,000 employees all told, and a branch in Osaka, Kyushu, Seoul and Dairen. It is divided into 15 departments. In addition to a photo studio, a refreshment room and an art gallery.

The history of Mitsui-koshi runs 255 years. When the seat of the government was established in Tokyo (then called Edo) the store already one of the largest and prosperous in Japan. By the way, may interest American readers to that the cash and the one-price system were invented and practiced at Mitsui-koshi two centuries ago, and by retailers in the United States, indeed it largely owed to these firms its early prosperity.

The management of the Mitsui-koshi is quite up-to-date. It has introduced almost every European or American method of business calculated to satisfaction to its customers as well as to promote its own interests.

The Mitsui-koshi has a cyclist messengers, a tele department, a mail and a complaint office, and a repair and a musical instrument department.

The "purchasing" on approval system of the Mitsui-koshi is its adaptation to the Japanese conditions. In Japan, where the money is scarce, it sends out its goods on approval.

The speedy Denver Cottrells are to be the opponents for the Zooz this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock at Zoo park. Last year the locals had difficulty in defeating the Cottrells and there should be some good baseball here today. Art Moore will appear on third base for the locals. Jimmy Counts having departed for Silver City, N. M., where he will play ball. Lomax is scheduled to do the pitching today. Miller or Walkham will oppose him.

Tomorrow the fans will have their first taste of Western league ball, the St. Joseph team stopping here for an exhibition game with the Zooz. The St. Joe team has a former Millionaire on its staff, Ralph Glaze, who is helping to keep his club fighting for first place with the Grizzlies.

Polo Team of Cheyenne Mountain Country Club

Left to Right, Joseph Harrison, Dr. Gerald B. Webb, Foxhall Keene, John Hobbs. The same team that put up such a snappy game last year, will represent the Cheyenne Mountain Country club in the polo tournament to be held at the field at Broadmoor, September 2 to 12. Hobbs, a famous New York and California player, was one of the sensations last year, as was Foxhall Keene, member of the international teams. Dr. G. B. Webb, on his dappled gray mount was one of the best players last year.

Tournament at Cheyenne Mountain Country Club Will Be Attended by Better Matched Teams and Faster Ponies Than Last Year; Trophies Valued at $10,000

The broad green expanse of the turf of the polo field at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club is now in excellent condition for polo playing and a number of enthusiasts of the game have been out almost every afternoon for the last 10 days getting limbered up and trying their mounts in preparation for the big tournament to be held here September 2 to 12. The appearance in the local tournament of teams from California, Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago, in addition to the Denver Country club, Denver Prairie Dogs and Sheridan polo ranch team has increased interest in the meeting here which will be the most elaborate ever attempted in the west.

Ponies which have been out all winter on the ranges have been brought in and are being given thorough training. John Hobbs, the clever player of the local last year, stopped off in Colorado Springs last week en route to New York. Hobbs is enthusiastic over this year's tournament. He witnessed the international matches at Meadowbrook.

Overconfidence on the part of the American polo team gave the British invaders the jump in the recent international play and paved the way for the capture of the trophy and championship by the Englishmen. Then, too, the American team would have been in better working order at the outset had Devereux Milburn been played at back in the first game instead of at No. 3, from which position he was drawn back in the second game. Physically the American team was in magnificent condition.

The English ponies were smaller and handier than the American mounts. While there was not much difference in speed, the English ponies were quicker to start and their riders had the edge on horsemanship, he says. Hobbs goes from here to Orono, Maine, where he will play until it is time to ship his horse east. He will be in close touch with Foxhall Keene, who will also be a member of the Colorado Springs team, and who is now playing on Long Island at Meadowbrook and elsewhere. Keene will ship a string of polo ponies here from New York, while Hobbs will ship his ponies from California in the same consignment with the Colorado Country club mounts.

Hobbs states that the three Colorado tournaments will be of higher grade this year than ever before because the competing teams will be far better matched. Some interesting polo gossip concerning the tournaments planned for Colorado, is given by a Denver writer. The Equestrian, his letter says. Polo gossip is rife these days among horsemen and devotees of the outdoor life. The thoroughbreds have been shipped away from Overland, to compete in the north-west, yet interest is being maintained in equestrian sport by the approach of the polo season in this city, Colorado Springs and Glenwood.

The principal trophies captured by the celebrated Prairie Dog team last year, and now in the custody of the Denver Country club are insured for $10,000. Their actual value is far greater, and their sentimental value beyond pricing. The insurance value, of course, does not include the many individual cups already ordered from Bohm-Alten, but which have not yet been delivered. These replicas go to the individual players on the victorious teams on the several events. In addition to the stable room at the country club, additional stalls for about 75 ponies to be shipped here from New York, California, Wyoming and other points, will be obtained at Overland and other convenient points. The visiting stables will be in Denver for a fortnight or more. Shipping from New York and California is an expensive proposition, but real polo ponies can not be picked up casually anywhere, and to say the least, they are worthy of their expressage and then some.

By RINGSIDE.
NEW YORK, July 11.—The third of the series of championship fights stretching over a span of less than three weeks, and the one which is destined to be the best contested of the trilogy will occur in London next Thursday evening, July 16. The heavyweight championship of Europe is at stake, and Georges Carpentier, the present incumbent of the title, and "Gunboat" Smith of California and the United States navy will trade heavy wallops for 20 rounds to determine the rightful owner of the crown. The fights will take place in Dick Burges' palatial Olympic arena, where Ritchie and Welch struggled last Tuesday for the lightweight title.

Smith is of the temperamental and unless he lands his knock punch in the early rounds, he is easily discouraged. Carpentier, a tranquilist outside of the ring, once he dons the padded mitt, is a holy terror. Smith will undoubtedly fray a pronounced shoulder, make Carpentier harder, Georges' memory of a recent memory of a valuable addition to the Frenchman's record. Carpentier, "Soma" Hitter. There is a prevalent, but mistaken impression that Carpentier is simply a boxer, and that he cares nothing for heavy exchanges. Joe Jeannette, who fought Carpentier as recently as last March, is authority for the statement that the French champion is an expert at the Frenchman's "Terrible Terry" McGovern at the zenith of his power. In reviewing his fight with Carpentier upon his return to America, Jeannette said to the writer: "Don't make any mistake about Carpentier, being dependent upon his cleverness to win his ring battles. He is all that Terry McGovern was in the days of yore. Carpentier never stops rushing and is constantly flailing his long arms at his opponent. He took me by surprise by his rushing tactics, and no one in the club was more astounded when the referee awarded the decision to me after 15 rounds of furious fighting. That was one time I got away with something."

"Carpentier is not lacking a wallop, either." This he forcefully demonstrated to me when he sent me flat on my back in the very first round. A right hook did the trick. My jaw soon swelled to twice its normal size. That's how hard that French boy can hit. So it looks as though Mr. Gunboat Smith has undertaken a man-sized job when he sailed across the sea to exchange punches with the best France has to offer in the fighting line. The sneaky Buckley protegee is not the gamest man in the world, contrary to the general opinion. If there is a soft spot in the person of Smith it will be brought to the surface in this fight.

Brock Wins Aeroplane Race to Paris

MAN GETS DUCKING IN THE CHANNEL

July 11.—An American, Walter L. Brock, today captured first prize in the aeroplane race from London to Paris and return. Brock out-flew the nearest rival, Raoul Garros, a French aviator, by more than an hour in the distance 502 miles in a direct line. The flight was over 11 minutes six seconds.

An incident of the race was a plunge into the English channel which suffered when his aeroplane fell from a considerable height when on the return trip. He kept afloat with the aid of a life belt up by a passing steamer.

Renaux met with misfortune in losing his way several times on his trip, more than seven hours being required to make the trip to the coast. After his arrival there Renaux said he would start on the return trip but would descend at Calais and withdraw from the race. He carried a passenger.

He finished in eight hours 28 minutes 47 seconds actual flying time. He had trouble with his propellers and steering planes on the outward trip. His entrants, Reginald Carr and Louis Noel, descended before reaching the coast on the flight to Paris.

DENVER YOUTH BEATEN FOR SOUTHERN NET TITLE

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 11.—Carlton Y. Smith of Atlanta, southern champion, today defeated Paul Fanning of Denver, Colo., in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, in the Tennessee state tennis championship. It was his third successive victory and gave him possession of the trophy.

A state motorcycle association has been formed in Iowa.

These are some of the leading members of the "California Tennis Syndicate," which has come out of the west after years of conquering bands. McLoughlin and Bundy made a memorable trip east in 1909, when the former was 19 years old. Last year Johnston, then 17 years old, vanquished the mighty men of the racket and now R. Lindley Murray is causing excitement. Mrs. Bundy (who was Miss Sutton) could never be stopped on the court and Miss Mary K. Brown has brought scarcely less honor to the Golden Gate. The California syndicate now demands a great national championship on home grounds. It is likely the officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis association will yield to them even though it dims the glory of Newport as a tennis center. The Californians are gunning especially for the National All Comers and are cultivating cross courts near San Francisco with that event in mind. They may not be able to wrest the All Comers from Newport, but it is regarded as certain that the clay court championship of the United States will be decided in California next season.

Nothing but a tournament so big in itself that it will attract the foremost players of the world will satisfy the Californians. They feel they have made a tremendous proportion of recent tennis history and that their deeds of valor at Newport and Wimbledon deserve some reward.

By FRANK G. MENKE.
NEW YORK, July 11.—Why not limit the double header games to seven innings each? It's a scheme that has been tried out in the Southern leagues with great success.

Two seven inning games in one afternoon would give the average fan just about as much baseball as he could comfortably absorb. It wouldn't force the ball player to the extreme limit of his endurance, and, best of all, it would enable the fan to get home in time for a warm dinner.

Cutting the double header games to seven innings would do no one harm. It would do plenty of good. Cutting off four innings from an afternoon's baseball season would mean lessening the playing period about one hour and, therefore, the pastime would end before darkness settled over the land.

The season of double headers is now upon us. Every fan is keen about taking in a bargain bill, but about about the fourth or fifth inning of the second game the exhibition becomes monotonous. Of course the greater majority of the fans stick to the better finish, but they attack not so much because their baseball appetite isn't satisfied but because they want to see just how the game will finish.

Most double headers begin about 2 p. m., allowing something over two hours for each game and a 15-minute intermission between combats. It means that play doesn't end until about 6:30. That means that the fan doesn't get home until from 7:15 to 8 p. m., owing to the delay in getting out of the crowded park and the usual delay caused by the slow moving of a fleet of special street cars. And every housewife is fully agreed that 7:15 to 8 p. m. is too darned late for any man to expect his wife to keep dinner simmering.

If the games were cut two innings each, the playing period would be lessened about an hour, which would mean that the final innings of the second game would not have to be played by torchlight and that father would get home on time to dine with the rest of the family.

The seven-inning double header idea probably will prove to be a popular one with the fans and it is likely that if the association assumes sufficient voice that the ruling powers in baseball will reconsider and amend their laws so that seven-inning double headers will be the rule.

Some Athletic enthusiasts already are speculating on whether Connie Mack will pitch Bender or Plank in the opening game of the 1914 world series, but this speculation seems a bit premature.

It is true that the Quaker City gang has a rather firm grasp on the first rung of the American league ladder, but the race isn't over. Not by about 11 weeks or so. And some upsets are about due.

The Athletics are on the top not because they have played championship baseball but because most of the other clubs have so far put up only a bush league brand of the national pastime. The Athletics are far below their 1913 form. Theirs has been an indifferent exhibition at the best and if one of the three teams that are trailing the leaders should happen to trail themselves to a healthy winning streak it quickly will close up the gap that divides it from the world champions.

The law of baseball average rules that at least one team must connect with a winning streak somewhere around midseason, and if that team should happen to be either the Tigers, Senators, Brown, Red Sox or even the White Sox it will bode ill for Connie Mack's tribe.

Ed G. Barrows Speaks.
Ed G. Barrows, president of the International league, declares that "baseball has gone back 10 years as the result of the Federal league's advent."

While the vast majority of fans agree with Barrows about the game performing a go-back, only a few are in accord with his idea that the Federal league is mainly responsible.

In our opinion, the avaricious big league magnates are more responsible than anyone else. In fact, they are primarily at fault. Had they paid the ballplayers salary commensurate with the money the players earned for them there in little likelihood that any of the players would have jumped to a third league, or that an "outlaw" league ever would have been formed. But the magnates figured the players their salaries figured them as something of a heaven-given chattel. And they treated them just as suited their mood and paid them just as little as possible.

What was the result? The players became dissatisfied and aired their grievances. The howls reached the ears of Gilmore and the men who started the Federal league—and it gave them their big league idea.

Experimented on Tinker.
Gilmore, after reading the walls from the underpaid players figured that by offering them more money he could get them to jump to the league he was then thinking of organizing. He tried to experiment on Joe Tinker—and he found it successful. And he has tried it on others and found that a salary increase brought him players from the American and National league ranks.

If the magnates in the American and National leagues had played fair with most of their players and given them in salary a fair share of the huge profits, the ball players would have been fairly contented. But they wouldn't have had any grievances at all. They wouldn't have been such a volume of them. And the idea of starting a big "outlaw" league never would have been given a second thought by Gilmore and his crowd for they knew that they had to have good ball players to start a new league and they wouldn't have tried to take away contented players.

It was the piggyback tricks of the magnates toward the players that gave the Federal league its chance. Mr. Barrows, and the fact that baseball has been set back considerably is directly traceable to the greed of those big league magnates.

With the victory of Welsh vegetarianism will get a boost. Welsh has always claimed to be a vegetarian, though many persons have suspected he did it for advertising purposes. He insisted he lived mostly on peanuts.

He was generally believed till he was caught a few months ago in a quiet Los Angeles roadside stuffing away a large chicken with the same ardor that Jack Johnson would display.

When he came to the United States he was a rubber in Brown's gymnasium on Twenty-third street, New York city. He did odd jobs for a long time, and there acquired a taste for boxing.

Talking a little about it he went out through the country and managed to make his living by fighting. After several losses he became pretty well known. He went to England and won the 14th N. light-weight championship.

Then he fought Matt Wells, another contender, and took it from him. Welsh set out on another trip to the United States and again going back to London he fought Wells and regained his championship.

He has been fighting a long time; his record has begun to show traces of "aging" and few experts believe he could be as fast as he was in the past. That, therefore, picked Ritchie out to fight him. But Welsh was evidently not a bit daunted.

He fought as if he was a light 12 fight, as a 12 as he was. He was a machine to do with his ability to hold his feet so long.

He is a very clever boxer and has a way of holding and blocking the heavy fighters. But he is not a heavy fighter. He has the punch, and a machine fight. Characteristic Expressions of New World's Lightweight Champion

Freddie Welsh, new lightweight champion of the world, by virtue of one of those British decisions "on points," is another one of the class of fighters the fans love to call a "gentleman pugilist." He is not rough and ready, surly, uncouth, vulgar, nor drunken. In fact, he is not for his one "tin ear" and his great nervous energy, he might pass ordinarily for anything but a fighter.

With the victory of Welsh vegetarianism will get a boost. Welsh has always claimed to be a vegetarian, though many persons have suspected he did it for advertising purposes. He insisted he lived mostly on peanuts.

Members of State Land Board, Following Trip Through Eastern El Paso County, Enthusiastic Over Farming Conditions

September 2 is the date set for the public auction in Colorado Springs of 200,000 acres of state land by the state land board. The date was named by the state land board yesterday. The board will meet in Denver tomorrow to decide all details in connection with the auction and also to work out the system by which the land appraisement shall be made.

Volney T. Hoggatt and John E. Field, members of the board, who were on the trip through the dry farming section last Friday, are more than ever enthusiastically over the possibilities for farming on El Paso county land and are determined to work out a big settlement plan whereby hundreds of settlers will be brought to this country. This campaign is to be carried on in cooperation with the Rock Island railroad officials who are now in Colorado Springs to get the proposition under way.
